Three Grandchildren, President Menaced In Extortion Note

Held in New York After Phone Call

Kidnap Threat Is Mailed to Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park.

New York, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Benjamin Franklin Varn, 33, of Charleston, S. C., was under arrest tonight, charged with threatening to kidnap "Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall, grandchildren of President Roosevelt, unless he received $168,000.

Varn, a former naval officer and member of a wealthy family, was accused of sending a threatening letter to Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at Hyde Park about ten days ago. The letter said that if Mrs. Roosevelt failed to carry out instructions harm would come to the President. It was signed by "The Order of Zangarra."

Threats also were made against the infant daughter of Elliott Roosevelt, the President's son, now in Wshington.

Details Kept Secret.

Details of the contents of the letter were withheld by postal authorities, but it was learned Mrs. Roosevelt was told to await instructions before making contact to pay the money, which was to be in denominations of $1, $5, $10, $20 and $50.

The message also included a New York telephone number which was traced to a midtown Y. M. C. A. Police refused to say whether it was there that Varn was arrested. He was to be arraigned in Federal court tomorrow.

"Sistie" and "Buzzie" are children of President Roosevelt's only daughter, Anna, recently divorced from Curtis Dall, New York broker.

The children have made their home with their mother and grandparents in the White House since Mr. Roosevelt's inauguration. Terms of the Dall divorce were understood to have granted alternate custody of the children to both parents. En route to New York from Reno after receiving her decree, Mrs. Dall left the children in Chicago for a first visit with their father.

Police were secretive about Varn's arrest. They declined to say where he was apprehended or where he was being held. The letter was in the hands of postal authorities and questions as to its entire contents were not answered.

Varn' Injured in War.

It was believed, however, that the telephone number given Mrs. Roosevelt was traced and that Varn was taken in his rooms at the Y. M. C. A. Desk clerks would neither confirm nor deny statements to this effect.

Varn was understood to have been injured during his war service in the Navy, and is on a Government pension.

New York detectives entered the case when postal authorities asked for aid in running down their man here. At police headquarters, where Varn was booked, Johnny Broderick, New York's ace detective and

Virginia Jury Dooms Mais to Death in Chair

Tri-State Gangster Found Guilty in Four Hours; Second to Die.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—Robert Mais, second member of the Tri-State gang to stand trial for a hold-up murder here, was found guilty tonight of killing E. M. Huband, a Federal Reserve truck driver, and sentenced to die in the electric chair November 1.

Walter Legenza, also found guilty of the same crime, is to die October 22.

The verdict, brought in after a four-hour session, was declared improper in its original form by Judge John L. Ingram and the jurors were sent back to correct a technical fault in its phrasing. They had reported finding "the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree" which the judge instructed them to change. His instructions to the jury had ordered them to disregard the first-degree charge in the indictment.

A few minutes later the jurors again entered the court and reported "We, the jury, find the defendant guilty of murder in the first degree, as a principal in the second degree, and fix the penalty at death."

Mais appeared unmoved as Judge Ingram pronounced sentence.

Defense Counsel Charles W. Moss moved to set aside the verdict as contrary to law and evidence, but Judge Ingram overruled the motion.

As he dismissed the jury, Judge Ingram said:

"Your verdict has the approval of the court and, I believe, the approval of the citizens of the City of Richmond."

Dern Rejects Demands to Expel Foulois

Secretary Writes House General Convicted Without Trial.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Secretary Dern refused yesterday to meet the demand of a House military affairs sub-committee, that Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois be summarily dismissed as chief of the Air Corps.

In a diplomatically worded letter, the Secretary of War criticized the committee's method of procedure and ended by tossing the whole matter back into its lap. He asserted Foulois had been denied his constitutional rights in that he had not been permitted to submit rebuttal evidence, was not represented by counsel and had been unable to secure the committee's records.

The committee's report, Dern said, was "not limited to an indictment, but, in effect, finds the accused guilty, fixes the sentence and calls on the Secretary of War to execute it."

Opens Old Wounds.

Dern's letter, addressed to Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, chairman of the subcommittee, undoubtedly will open up old wounds, caused by past undercover warfare between the House military affairs group and the War Department.

At one time last session this battle broke into the open, bringing harsh words from both sides. This took place even before the subcommittee demanded Gen. Foulois' resignation.

It was after lengthy hearings on War Department purchases and alleged lobbying activities that the sub-committee called for removal of the Air Corps chief, on the ground that he allegedly had violated the law in approving airplane purchases by negotiated contracts, instead of by competitive bidding.

Called "Weak Spot."

The same report sternly criticized Foulois' ability and honesty and questioned his efficiency in supervising the Army's emergency transportation of the air mail. Committee members stated that they were not out to "get" Foulois, but that they felt he was a weak spot in the Air Corps.

Throughout much of the last session it was general knowledge that Secretary Dern and the House Military Affairs Committee were not on friendly terms. In fact, Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, once testified before the House Rules Committee that he was "persona non grata" with the Army General Staff.

The trouble came to a head over what members interpreted as the

Composers Face Antitrust Suit

Perpetual Injunction Is Asked by Cummings.

New York Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Attorney General Homer S. Cummings today filed suit in Federal court seeking dissolution of the powerful American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers under the Sherman antitrust law.

The suit, naming the society, the Music Publishers Protective Association and the Music Dealers Society, Inc., is directed against 131 defendants, all officials of the three organizations.

It alleges that these organizations, together, control 90 per cent of the publication, sale and distribution of popular music in the United States. The Government asks a perpetual injunction.

Artist Comins' Nude Sun Bath Horrifies Staid New England

A Washington artist and his lawyer friend will face the district court in Gloucester, Mass., today to answer charges of violating the austerity of New England by sun bathing in the nude.

The accused shockers are Eben F. Comins, prominent Capital painter, who has won fame for his frescoes on wet plaster, and Leighton Calkins, an Englewood (N. J.) attorney, whose brother is a former president of the New England Watch and Ward Society.

But their imposing connections did them no good when a horrified, and unidentified, woman espied their unclad figures as they reposed blissfully in the marshes back of Good Harbor Beach. She carried the tidings to the authorities and yesterday summonses were served on the summer visitors.

Sergt. David E. Mehlman, jr., who swore out the complaint, stated Comins and Calkins were lying naked in the marshland section only a short distance from where a swimming party was holding forth. The woman who notified police was a member of the group.

One of Washington's most versatile artists, Comins is an exponent of the modern school of art and has also produced notable paintings along more conservative lines. Among those who have sat for portraits by him are Dean Roscoe Pound, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, Gen. William D. Connor, Ruth St. Denis and the late Calvin Coolidge, jr.

In 1931 he won the landscape award at the exhibition of the Washington Society of Artists at the Corcoran Gallery of Art.

Calkins is the brother of the Rev. Raymond Calkins, of Cambridge. Calkins has been staying at the Harbor View Hotel with his daughter.

MITZI MAYFAIR.

Town Constable Herbert Elmo Hodges, 28, of Laurel, Md., was arrested, charged with extortion and held under $2,000 bond here yesterday after he was alleged to have accepted money from Mitzi Mayfair, dancer, appearing at the Earle Theater.

Miss Mayfair and her mother said they were driving from Baltimore to Washington Thursday of last week for a rehearsal when they were detained by road repairs. In an effort to reach here on time they speeded their automobile between Laurel and Muirkirk, when Hodges stopped them and told them they had been doing 65 miles per hour, they said.

The Mayfairs explained that they had urgent business in Washington, and that was why they had speeded.

"Wouldn't you like to see the show in Washington Monday?" Miss

Morgenthau Orders Probe Of Credit Lag

Refusal of Banks to Make Loans in Chicago Area to Be Sifted.

By Robert C. Albright.

An unexplained lag in the movement of credit to small industries, both from the banks and the Government's industrial loan set-up, culminated yesterday in a Treasury investigation of causes underlying the stalemate.

A study of bank loans in the Chicago Federal Reserve District was ordered by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, to find out why banks are turning down applications for loans, and why applications are dragging.

The order came as Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, announced loans totaling only $8,040,550 from the $300,000,000 RFC in-

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (Spl.).—A thunderous reception was given Gov. Albert C. Ritchie on his return here today from a six-week vacation at Cabourge, France.

Seldom has any citizen of Maryland been accorded the nonpartisan welcome that was given the chief executive.

Persons of all political faiths crowded into the bowl of Mount Royal Station to the number of 15,000 and cheered Mr. Ritchie as he stepped from his train. A squadron of airplanes zoomed overhead, bands played "Maryland, My Mary-

Probe of New Deal Voted By Bar Group

'Academicians' Leading New Deal Attack, Says Miller.

Milwaukee, Aug. 30 (Spl.). Whether the central government shall possess unlimited power is the question now hanging in the balance, Former Gov. Nathan L. Miller, of New York, said in an address tonight to the American Bar Association.

Discussing present tendencies at Washington, he charged that an effort is being made to destroy the Constitution by indirection and that "academicians" are leading the attack.

Gov. Miller declared the price of arbitrary power is the sacrifice of liberty and said that since the Supreme Court has only limited opportunity to preserve American institutions, the people themselves must be the guardians of their liberties.

His address gained significance because he is on the executive committee of the newly formed American Liberty League, organized as a nonpartisan group to defend and uphold constitutional principles.

"If a case can be made for the exercise of more power by the Federal Government," Gov. Miller said, "it is for the people in whom all power resides to make the grant. It is not for the servants of the peo-

Convention Undertakes Inquiry of Roosevelt Theories.

Milwaukee, Aug. 30 (AP).—The American Bar Association, which in four days of its convention here has heard some of its foremost leaders hammer the New Deal, today moved to investigate the effects of Rooseveltian theories of government.

Acting on a resolution adopted unanimously by the association's general council, the executive committee drew up instructions that the incoming president appoint a committee to make the investigation.

The resolution asserted that "rapid development in recent months of novel legislation and governmental trends in the Federal Government affecting the rights and liberties of American citizens and our constitutional form of government have resulted in a great diversity of opinion as to the effect of these theories * * * and hold a deep and peculiar interest for the bar of this country."

It added that the theories affect the "maintenance of the guarantees furnished by the * * * Constitution."

The investigators will report at the 1934 convention.

Textile Strike Is Set Tomorrow as U. S. Peace Move Fails

Firm Refuses To Sign Code; Sued as Test

First Action of Kind Filed in District Asks Injunction.

A suit that will test the power of the Government to enforce code provisions upon a concern that has not signed a code agreement was filed in District Supreme Court yesterday.

The suit seeks to enjoin W. F. Roberts Co., Inc., 829 Seventeenth street northwest, one of the city's largest printing concerns, from paying wages below the minimum fixed by the graphic arts code and from working employes longer than the maximum hours provided by the code.

Following filing of the suit, which was brought in the name of the United States Government, Justice Joseph W. Cox set September 14 as the date when the defendant must show cause why an injunction should not be granted.

The action was the first of its kind ever filed in the District. The Roberts Co. has never agreed to code provisions. NRA officials, however, have held that when a code is adopted by an industry all the members of that industry are bound by its provisions, regardless of whether they have actually agreed to those provisions.

Low Wages Alleged.

The petition charges that the printing company "has regularly and continuously, since February 26, 1934, failed to pay its employes the minimum wages provided and specified by said code and is now violating said provisions and will continue said violations."

As examples of the alleged wage violations, the Government specifies that one employe was paid 25 cents an hour for doing work for which the code specifies a minimum of 77 cents an hour. Another was paid, it is charged, 41.7 cents an hour, as compared with a code provision of 82 cents. Altogether, eight such alleged code violations are charged. Each is accompanied by an affidavit made by the employe concerned.

It is further charged in the petition that the printing company has failed to pay wages specified in the code for overtime work. Affidavits state that the same wages were paid for overtime work as for regular employment. The petition further declares that some employes have been required to work as many as 90 hours a week.

The code provides that no employe shall be required to work more than 520 hours in any 13-week period. The Government charged that some employes have been required to work as much as 800 hours in such a period.

It is also charged that the company has failed to post in its shop

Capital Is Chilled As Mercury Hits 53

Coldest Day Since May 27 Is Recorded Here.

Washingtonians pulled their blankets tight around them yesterday morning, when the mercury sank to 53 at 6 a. m., giving the District its coolest day since May 27.

Premature autumn weather sent occasional leaves scurrying from trees, and cold winds crept through the city as the temperature gradually rose to a maximum of 72 at 4 p. m.

Three Eastern cities reported the coldest August mornings since their Weather Bureaus were established. These were Scranton, Pa., with 40; Ithaca, N. Y., was 38, and Detroit, with 44.

Today will be fair and slightly warmer, with general northeast winds, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

Outstanding Facts In Strike at Glance

Salient facts of the cotton textile strike at a glance:

Workers involved—Estimated from 250,000 to 500,000.

Employes and dependents affected—1,250,000.

Number of mills—1,281.

Zero hour—11:30 p. m. Saturday.

Number of States where mills are located—21.

The demand of labor—A 30-hour week with no wage reduction; graduated wage rates for workers depending on skill required; limitation of machine load on employes; recognition of the United Textile Workers as representative of all workers for collective bargaining purposes; creation of an arbitration board with authority to make binding decisions.

Industry contends—NRA codes have greatly increased labor costs; the cost of raw cotton doubled; manufacturers paying a 4.5-cents-a-pound cotton processing tax; large surplus stock available and demand steadily decreasing; manufacturers unable to increase overhead and continue operations.

Steel Industry Adopts 5-Day Week, Cuts Pay

(Associated Press.)

Major steel companies acted yesterday to reduce expenses—through a five-day week and approximately 10 per cent pay cuts for salaried employes.

The United States Steel Corporation, largest unit in the industry, instructed subsidiaries to eliminate Saturday work for their salaried employes and to cut their pay accordingly.

Republic Steel and Jones & Laughlin, two other large producers, disclosed similar orders. Steel circles expected other companies to follow suit.

It was estimated that the industry employs approximately 40,000 office workers and that nearly half of that number are Steel Corporation employes. Approximately 383,000 wage earners were on steel mill pay rolls during July.

The Steel Corporation's announcement declared under "the present basis of operations," Saturday work was "irregular and unsatisfactory." The curtailment, becoming effective September 1, was to continue "at least until marked improvement in operations takes place."

Administration officials in Washington expressed regret at the steel companies' action. They agreed, however, there was nothing illegal in the action so long as the hourly pay did not fall below the minimum set by the code.

At NRA it was said that steel companies granted a 10 per cent increase in pay last April, and that the slash ordered today undoubtedly would be above the minimum permitted.

The steel company officials did not confer with NRA before announcing the decision. It was said there was no reason why this should have been done.

Missing Savant Hunted In Canada by Rangers

Glacier Park, Mont., Aug. 30 (AP).—Glacier National Park officials today pushed their search for Dr. F. H. Lumley, 27, of Columbus, Ohio, across the Canadian boundary.

A theory the educator may have left Glacier Park gained support when the last man known to have seen the Ohio State University professor said Lumley expressed an intention August 13, the day he disappeared, to go to Watertown, Canada.

Nation-Wide Walkout Is Expected to Affect 250,000 Workers.

Garrison Still Hopes for Truce

Extension of Strike to Other Lines Seen by Leader Gorman.

Hope of averting a Nation-wide cotton textile strike was abandoned by Federal officials last night after unionists issued orders for the walk-out to begin at 11:30 p. m. tomorrow.

Lloyd Garrison, aggressive chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, failed in an eleventh-hour attempt to negotiate a truce pending a joint investigation by the labor board, the NRA and the Department of Labor.

A recapitulation by Francis J. Gorman, fiery chairman of the strike committee, whose eyes were lined and bloodshot from loss of sleep, placed the number of workers subject to the strike orders at 250,000.

"There are only about 250,000 men and women employed in the mills at present," he explained. "Before the depression the total was 460,000. The workers and their dependents may number 1,250,000. The strike orders affect 1,281 mills."

Strike Extension Warned.

Gorman warned the strike would be extended to the silk, woolen and rayon plants of the textile industries unless the employers met demands for higher wages, shorter hours and other concessions similar to those sought by the cotton textile employes.

Orders for the tie-up were issued at noon. Garrison conferred separately later in the day with Gorman and George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute.

After Sloan left, Garrison announced the board "can not report that any substantial progress has been made toward settling the strike."

Asked whether he hoped the strike could be avoided, Sloan countered with:

"I suppose every citizen in America is hopeful the strike won't take place."

Observers recalled that Sloan

Street Car Runs Wild Down Connecticut Ave. Hill After Hitting Truck.

Twenty screaming street-car passengers, two of them bleeding from broken-glass gashes, hurtled in a brakeless street car at more than 60 miles an hour down the steep hill at Connecticut avenue and Ellicott street northwest late yesterday afternoon, after a collision with a coal truck had disabled the front-end brakes.

The car was stopped by Conductor Albert Mitchell, 30, 618 Seventh street southwest, who applied the rear-end hand brakes, bringing the car to a halt after the thrilling four-block ride.

The Capital Transit Co. street car collided at the intersection of the streets with a coal truck belonging to the Griffith Coal Co., driven by B. Brooks, colored, 23, of 69 Myrtle avenue northeast.

The car careened wildly down the hill, while passengers, shouting for help, crowded to the front exit, which had been jammed closed in the crash. Both air and handbrakes in the front were out of commission.

Motorman Fred Winstead, 34, of 1350 Fourth street southwest, was slightly injured in the collision, and severe lacerations were suffered by Mrs. Augusta Scott, 42, of the 1500 block of Church street northwest, and Annie Green, colored, 18, of the 1800 block of Eighteenth street northwest.

The three were taken to Emergency Hospital, where Mrs. Scott remained last night.

Wife of 'Curly' Byrd Sues For Divorce, Alleging Abuse

Mrs. Kate T. Byrd, wife of Harry C. ("Curly") Byrd, vice president of the University of Maryland, yesterday filed suit at Upper Marlboro for an absolute divorce.

Judge Joseph C. Mattingly, of the Prince Georges County Circuit Court, immediately signed a decree giving Mrs. Byrd $200 a month temporary alimony.

The suit charged Byrd abused his wife on numerous occasions. He also was described as constantly ordering her from home and humiliating her in front of their four children and company.

Mrs. Byrd alleged that on August 9 she was ordered from their home at University Park, Md., and was forced to come to Washington to live with her parents, with whom she is now staying. This, she declares, constitutes abandonment and desertion.

She pointed out that her husband never let her know the extent of his income, but that it exceeds $2,000 a month. Besides his position as vice president of the university, she said he was a newspaper writer, owner of a magazine and vice president of a bank.

Byrd, a native of Crisfield, Md., is connected with the famous Byrd family of Virginia. His children, whose custody is asked by Mrs. Byrd, are Harry C. Byrd, jr., 19; Evelyn W., 16; William K., 11, and Sterling, 7.

The couple were married in Washington December 27, 1913. They lived here until 1915, when they moved to Prince Georges County.

Chicago Credit Lag Probed by U. S. Treasury

Morgenthau Starts Inquiry Into Failure of Banks to Make Loans.

dustrial loan fund set up by Congress. Earlier the Federal Reserve Board disclosed loans of less than $7,000,000 from its similar funds of $280,000,000.

"May Open Up," He Says.

Chairman Jones, who said most applications received are from persons "with worthy ambitions, but little collateral," told reporters the field of industrial borrowers "has proven small, but may open up."

Mr. Jones said he knew little of the details of the Morgenthau inquiry, and must withhold comment. Later he added:

"The banks are just trying to be careful and prudent. I don't think they are unduly cautious."

At the Treasury, it was said the Chicago Reserve District credit study will be conducted by 40 or 50 graduate college students and instructors, who will examine first hand 4,000 loan applications refused by the banks, including 2,000 cases supplied by the banks and 2,000 by individuals.

Changes in Federal credit policies, if this is found necessary to keep credit moving, were at stake. Directing the study from Washington will be Dr. Jacob Viner, Treasury official, while Dr. C. O. Hardy, of Brookings Institute, will be in charge of the field staff. Territory includes the entire Seventh Federal Reserve District embracing Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana and part of Iowa.

To Probe Other Angles.

Secretary Morgenthau wants to find out if banks are refusing to make sound loans to worthy borrowers and, if so, for what reason. His staff will explore other angles, such as the possibility that Federal money is being used to liquidate bank loans.

Cooperating, it was said, would be the Federal Reserve Board, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, together with industrial and business groups.

Chairman Jones said he knew of no one thing that would speed up RFC loans to industry, although corporate reorganizations might account for some new credit movement.

He cited case after case of unsuccessful applicants for loans. One man had a patented invention but no capital, and wanted to borrow RFC money to build a factory. Another wanted to operate a plant to salvage mine refuse. Others wanted to start up antiquated factories on a shoestring. In none of these cases, he said, could the RFC offer help.

"I don't think we ought to lend money we know we are going to lose," he said. "We ought to lend money to get it back."

Law "Not Too Rigid."

He said he knew of few alterations in existing law that would help the situation, adding that the law was "not too rigid." He voiced the belief, however, that Congress should not have fixed a $500,000 limit on loans to any one industry.

A chart made public by the RFC chairman, showing 100 loans totaling $8,040,550 made under the loans-to-small-industries act, also listed 171 loans aggregating $16,687,825 previously made "to assist in the National recovery administration program." These latter loans, made indirectly to businesses through mortgage companies, brought the total industrial loans of all kinds to $24,728,375, as of August 25.

New York drew heaviest from the new loans-to-industries fund, with 13 loans aggregating $2,252,500. Twenty States, including Maryland, were not represented at all in the direct loan fund. Two loans, totaling $22,500 were negotiated in the District, and one loan of $150,000 was made in Virginia.

of Boston, have been among the prominent critics of the New Deal at convention sessions. They have sounded charges that the New Deal goes against the Constitution and encroaches upon the rights of States. Vigorous defense of the program also has been delivered.

The council's action, taken behind closed doors, diverted interest from another session devoted to the discussion of crime prevention.

Two Federal crime fighters, J. Edgar Hoover and Joseph B. Keenan—made a joint plea for closer cooperation between Federal and local enforcement units.

Criticism of the delegation of legislative and judicial powers to administrative agencies operating under various phases of the New Deal program was voiced in the report of a special committee on administrative law.

The committee recommended the association grant it authority to confer with Government officials and Congressional committees to obtain action on the committee's conclusions.

The committee recommended the divorcement, in principle, of the judicial functions of Federal administrative tribunals from their legislative and executive functions, and the placing of them in a Federal administrative court, or in an appropriate number of independent tribunals analogous to the Board of Tax Appeals.

The third major recommendation asked reform in administrative machinery.

ple, who exercise only delegated powers, to change their Constitution by indirection."

Admitting that Democratic institutions involve some sacrifice of energy and efficiency, Gov. Miller said that was the price which had to be paid for liberty.

"That price," he continued, "may be thought too high in times of stress; and in countries, which have not enjoyed the blessings of liberty under free institutions as we have done for nearly a hundred and fifty years, liberty has been and is being sacrificed for arbitrary power. It matters not how, by whom, in what form or for what purpose, benevolent or otherwise, it is exercised, the price of arbitrary power is the sacrifice of liberty.

"License is the abuse of liberty. The object of our free institutions is to preserve liberty whilst preventing its abuse. The socialistic school of thought treats liberty and license as synonymous. It would destroy liberty to protect the weak from the exactions of the strong, and it must be owned that the predatory acts of those who have abused liberty do call for measures to prevent such measures. Until human nature changes, new abuses will doubtless occur requiring new measures for their repression. Very likely the destruction of liberty and the reduction of all to a common level would obviate that.

Question of Price.

"Again it is a question of price. That price will appear too great to those of us who think that the progress of the world and the greatest happiness of the greatest number are still dependent on individual effort and initiative stimulated by the hope of just reward.

"Abuses can be prevented without closing the door of hope and opportunity. The highest concepts of a social duty and obligation can be observed without reducing all to a state of dependence. The thriftless, the indolent and the unfortunate can be provided for without depriving all of the incentive to thrif, industry and care."

Gov. Miller discussed current tendencies rather than specific measures adopted under the New Deal, asserted that both parties bear responsibility for these tendencies and urged that preservation of American institutions not be allowed to become a political issue.

"The patriotic and far-seeing men and women of both political parties must prevent that," he continued. "They must make common cause in the defense of our cherished institutions, as they most certainly will if convinced of their danger. I assert, and I believe there are few within the sound of my voice who doubt that those institutions are in danger.

People Have Cooperated.

"Extraordinary measures are being adopted and unusual experiments tried to meet an emergency. With characteristic patience, patriotism and trust in their chosen leader, the American people have cooperated with little question or cavil. But extraordinary powers once exercised are not easily abandoned. Their exercise soon becomes a habit and custom confirms their validity. Their permanence is already being considered."

Referring to creation of Government corporation in war time as convenient agencies for exercising war powers, Gov. Miller said their use in peace time has grown until few know how many there are or what powers under the Constitution they exercise.

"They function like private corporations," he said. "Their managers are chosen in like manner without the public scrutiny involved in the selection of public officials. Naturally they do not feel the accountability to the public of public officials. Naturally they ignore the distinction between public and private business. Thus through corporate action the Government is led into fields of local and private activity which it would not and could not enter officially. But a few years ago the people would have been appalled by the mere proposal to exercise Government power in that way. Now, apparently, unnoticed, the practice is growing with possibilities of abuse and dangers to our institutions which few seem to realize."

Raps Use of Federal Funds.

Gov. Miller criticized use of Federal funds in localities for local purposes as a blow at local pride and self-reliance and an encouragement to inefficiency and extravagance.

"Wholly apart from the question of power, the only way to assure proper accountability for the expenditure of the public money and to maintain virility in State and local governments is for each unit to provide its own revenues for its own purposes," he said. "Nothing short of catastrophe or National emergency will justify a different way.

"With the increasing complexity of society and the expansion of trade and commerce, there was bound to be a vast extension of Federal power and a corresponding restriction of State power, but the resulting greater importance of maintaining the independence of State and Federal power has been forgotten in the effort to shift the burden even of purely local needs. The more the Federal Government does, the more the people become accustomed to the presence of Federal agents in the management of their affairs, the more they are inclined to ask the Federal Government to do, not realizing that ultimately they must directly or indirectly foot the bill.

"However, whilst the virility of the local governments has been greatly impaired by the influences I have mentioned, we still preserve the form of dual Government established by the Constitution, and it is still possible to arouse pride in local self-government, though it may require a costly experience to learn that bureaucratic government is inefficient, extravagant and destructive of liberty and that the effort to shift the burdens of Government results in the imposition of heavier burdens on all."

Impatience Is Noted.

For some years, Gov. Miller said, there has been growing impatience with constitutional restraints involving constant attacks "from academic halls, from the ever present demagogues, and from various groups whose real objective has been and still is the overthrow of our free institutions and the establishment of a new social order." It was, he said, an agitation for making Congress supreme above the written Constitution.

"Now," Gov. Miller said, "the attack has shifted. A new and more effective method has been discovered to destroy the Constitution. The present effort is to destroy it by construction, and again academicians are leading the attack.

"The propagandists warn the Supreme Court for its own future standing not to apply Constitutional tests to social and economic legislation. Their propaganda, and it is nothing less, is greatly aided by social and economic conditions. The present century has witnessed a tremendous quickening of social consciousness. We have formed new concepts of social duty and responsibility. Though such concepts dominate all social, economic and political thought and action, some seem to think they can be made effective only by a central government of supreme and unlimited power, which is state socialism, state capitalism or state despotism, as you choose.

"It is not surprising that the tendencies to which I have referred should culminate in times like these in measures, which many believe destructive of free institutions and which if indefinitely continued will most certainly effect a complete change in our scheme of government. At a time of experimentation to relieve economic and social distress and to promote recovery, short-cuts were sure to be taken and measures were sure to be adopted without too close a scrutiny of their Constitutional validity."

Constitution Upheld.

Gov. Miller argued that the framers of the Constitution did not gear it to the stage coach and deplored "slurring reference to our eighteenth century Constitution." Framers of the Constitution, he said, foresaw vast changes and visualized a country stretching across the continent. He said the Constitution is not a code of laws to fit temporary conditions, but a scheme of government based on fundamental principles.

The principle that all power resides in and is derived from the people, he continued, is directly opposed to the idea of State supremacy, "which is gaining headway with us and has already been established under various names in other countries in which the new order has less to overcome."

The principle of Federal and State sovereignty operating within the same territorial jurisdiction is, Gov. Miller said, a unique device to preserve local autonomy. He said the principle that the central government was one of enumerated powers and those to be implied from those enumerated powers has been gradually weakened and is now seriously threatened.

"Some critics of the Constitution would destroy the sovereignty of the State governments as Alexander Hamilton was willing to do," Gov. Miller said. "Very likely some desirable ends would thus be accomplished temporarily at least, but only by establishing a huge bureaucracy at Washington, which in the end would be destructive of all the American people hold dear."

Already Change Urged.

He said that if changed conditions make it desirable now to confer more power on the Federal Government to enable it to deal with social and economic problems, the orderly and honest way is to amend the Constitution.

"A large part of the so-called economic and social legislation necessarily falls outside of the powers granted to the Federal Government either expressly or by implication and within those reserved to the States or the people," he declared. "Good reason can no doubt be given for extending Federal power in that field. One of them is the increasing need for uniformity. It takes time and effort to secure uniform action by a number of States and the lack of it is often a deterrent to the adoption of measures thought to be desirable."

"That, undoubtedly, is a weakness of our dual system, but we have always managed to find ways under the Constitution ultimately to give effect to the public will. However, impatience with restraint upon the immediate accomplishment of purpose leads to evasions and to the exercise of power on mere pretext or subterfuge. The permanent harm done by such abuse of power far outweighs the temporary good accomplished. The good is in plain view. The ultimate harm is not perceived. We are thus led to break down the barriers to our immediate desires, unmindful that they are necessary to the preservation of our liberties."

Gov. Miller said centralization of power in the Federal Government undoubtedly would obviate weaknesses in the dual system, but would involve the evils of bureaucracy.

"Thus, the good to be accomplished must be weighed against the resulting harm of our democratic institutions," he said. "Surely it is for the people, not for their servants, to make that choice. It should be made deliberately after the full discussion assured by the method provided for changing the Constitution. The choice is between local autonomy with its resulting weakness and complete centralization of power with its inevitable bureaucracy. There is no middle ground.

Supreme Court Discussed.

"There are some who think that the Supreme Court may preserve our institutions. But the courts have no such power. They possess and exercise only judicial power to decide justiciable controversies presented to them for decision. In the exercise of that power, of course, they have to decide what law rules the case before them. But the exercise of many legislative and executive powers gives rise to no justiciable controversies cognizable by the courts. True, when the occasoin arises in the performance of its judicial duty the Supreme Court does expound the Constitution and its expositions have had a profound influence in making us a Nation and in keeping us on the path of ordered liberty.

"But recently a principle was enunciated in the Minnesota mortgage moratorium law case, which is likely to have as profound an influence in limiting unwarranted power as the great doctrine of implied powers had in extending needed power. Chief Justice Hughes said 'emergency does not increase granted powers or remove or diminish the restrictions imposed upon power granted or reserved.' The bearings of that principle on the subject under discussion will be appreciated when it is recalled that that case involved the exercise of State power and that under our dual system State Legislatures have all the powers not withheld, whilst Congress has only those that are granted.

"However, the people must be the guardians of their own liberties. They have too profound an attachment for their institutions willingly to abandon them. They love their liberties too much knowingly to subject them to the caprices of bureaucratic government, however well intentioned. They still have ambitions for their posterity and will not intentionally close the door of hope and opportunity to their children or their children's children.

"But the thief steals in while the watchman sleeps. Eternal vigilance is still the price of liberty. We have been enjoying the blessings of liberty for many years without paying the price. We have taken it for granted that our free institutions are invulnerable. They are challenged, and the challenge is the more dangerous because insidious. Those who wish to maintain ordered liberty and the supremacy of the people must come to grips with those whose objective is state supremacy in whatever form it may be proposed."

Americans, Inc. New Rival of Liberty League

(United Press.)

Formation of Americans, Inc.—which includes such prominent Democrats as Senator Kenneth McKellar, of Tennessee, and Representative Isabella Greenway, of Arizona—was announced last night.

The organization's representatives said their function would be to "explain the recovery program to the American people." The group is strictly nonpartisan, it was said, and was not organized specifically to combat the American Liberty League. The latter organization, formed recently by a group of men including Alfred E. Smith, John W. Davis and several prominent Republicans, announced it would guard American property and personal rights.

Americans, Inc., said they hoped to develop among citizens "the principles and ideals of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, William McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt, Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt."

One of the organization's chief tenets is that "recovery is essential to National existence."

McKellar recently won renomination to the Senate on a platform of unswerving allegiance to the Roosevelt principles. Mrs. Greenway is a personal friend of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Other trustees of Americans, Inc., are:

Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Senator William J. Bulow, of South Dakota; Representative Henry B. Steagall, of Alabama, and Admiral Mark L. Bristol. Temporary president is Arthur Clarendon Smith, Washington business man.

The organization's announcement said it would attempt to help local government units solve problems. Discussing the changing aspect of the Federal Government, the organization says:

"The grave danger now is, of course, that the pendulum of change may swing too far; that in our enthusiasm for something different we may attempt to change more rapidly and radically than the well-planned program of the President contemplates.

"The danger of the lack of understanding of the program is that the people may lose sight altogether of the fundamental ideals which made America great and end up in chaos."

Fight Stab Wound Fatal to Transient

Two Suspects Are Jailed but Refuse to Talk.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.). Stabbed in the chest during a fight at Brunswick last night, Jack Ledwell, 28, Jonesboro, Tenn., died at Montevue Hospital, near Frederick today.

Emory E. Selby, 38, and Arlie Forest, 29, both of Brunswick, are in the Frederick jail, pending an investigation.

Ledwell, a member of the Brunswick transient colony; Selby, a furloughed railroad worker, and Forest, discharged from the U. S. Army in 1932, are alleged to have been drinking and became involved in a quarrel in the railroad yards when one of the men drew a long knife and plunged it into the chest of Ledwell. Neither of the men in jail would make a statement.

Girl Wins W. C. T. U. Medal.

Lincoln, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.). Miss Anna Adams, 14, daughter of Mrs. Sue Adams, of Round Hill, won the pearl medal in a county contest held at Lincoln last night under the auspices of the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

'Taxpayers Are Only Losers In Sinclair Victory'—Mencken

Baltimore, Aug. 30 (AP).—Upton Sinclair's victory in the California primaries was as complete as all human history, and may be considered a victory by virtually every segment of mankind, H. L. Mencken, his old friend, said last night after reading latest dispatches from the West.

"Sinclair's victory," he declared, "was of a kind unparalleled in human history. He not only beat George Creel, Wall street and the booze trust. He also beat Thomas Jefferson, Alexander Hamilton, George Washington, Benjamin Franklin and the whole Adams family, not to mention St. Thomas Aquinas, Duns Scotus, Plato, Aristotle, Socrates and Solomon.

"Indeed, his triumph was so vast that he must now share it.

"The first swig from the jug of glory is his, but there are also swigs for the brain trust, the Antisaloon League, the Third International, the mental Telepathists, the chiropractors, the technocrats, theosophists, the vegetarians, the antivivisectionists, the antivaccinationists, the naturopaths, the Holy Rollers, the Utopian Society, the Bryanites, the faith healers, the Greenbackers, the cosmic ray wart removers, the crystal gazers, the new humanists, the proletarian poets, the International Labor Defense, the pacifists, the nudists and the Rosicrucians.

"I even claim a swig as a fellow Baltimoron and a life-long believer in witches.

"The only losers in all southern California are the taxpayers."

B. & O. Shops Shut Temporarily.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Baltimore & Ohio shops here announced today they would close temporarily, effective tomorrow. Eighty-five men will be affected. The shops have been operating regularly for some months, taking on additional employes gradually. The plant normally employs about 190.

Fess Deplores Trend Toward Dictatorship

Ohio Senator Says Many Roosevelt Moves Point to Absolutism.

Findlay, Ohio, Aug. 30 (AP).—United States Senator Simeon D. Fess asserted that "the trend toward dictatorship" is "among the dangerous involvements" of the present program of the Roosevelt Administration, in an address prepared for delivery at the Hancock County Republican picnic here late today.

"Few people can realize the extent in this direction to which the Administration has already gone," said the senior Senator from Ohio.

"The great significance is not only the extent, but the number of steps that have already been taken, beginning with Congress responding to the request of the President for control over agriculture, to be followed by the second request for control over industry. * * * These steps, taken as temporary measures, have now been demanded by the President to be made permanent, with additional authority to make the control complete and absolute."

Other "dangerous steps" in the Roosevelt program the Senator listed as complete control of the currency of the country, including gold and silver, and complete command over tariff-making. This, he asserted, "is to be extended to include the banking agencies of the country, where he now has complete control of the Federal Reserve system, and is rapidly reaching control through the purchase of controlled stock of the entire banking system of the country."

"All that now remains," said Fess, "to make it a complete dictatorship is for Congress to give the Executive power to declare war, which a rubber-stamp Congress would be glad to do if he requests it."

Referring to Administration expenditures for emergency relief, Fess said, "The practical effect of these expenditures of what is known as easy money from the Treasury has fastened upon our State in the form of taxation a mortgage of over a half billion dollars that must be met by the taxpayers."

Starhemberg In Pay of Duce, Says Winkler

Mussolini Rules Austria, Balked German Pact, Exile Charges.

Praha, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 30 (AP).—Franz Winkler, former Austrian vice chancellor, today charged that "Austria is completely in the hands of Mussolini."

The Italian premier, he said in an interview here, has contributed largely to funds used in supporting Prince Ernst von Starhemberg's Heimwehr, Fascist home guard.

A fugitive from Austria, Winkler charged that Mussolini brought termination of negotiations 18 month ago that, he said, would have led to an "agreement" between Germany and Austria.

"Mussolini has prevented and always will prevent any reconcilliation between Austria and Germany," the former vice chancellor added.

Winkler said Il Duce's alleged interference with German-Austrian negotiations came when he telephoned recommendations to Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, assassinated in the Nazi uprising in July, not to go to an alleged scheduled meeting of German representatives near Vienna last January.

"Dollfuss saw no way out of a Von Starhemberg-Mussolini dictatorship, under which he was a mere tool," Winkler charged. "That is why Dollfuss came to me in desperation several times before his death and entrusted to me large sums of money to help him free the country * * * "

"Von Starhemberg has received not less than $1,000,000 since 1929 to do Italy's dirty work in Austria," Winkler charged.

"The first 'Judas money' given by Mussolini to Von Starhemberg was split at the time with the notorious German Maj. Pabst (a former Heimwehr leader expelled from Austria in 1930).

"Von Starhemberg also received from Chancellor Schober of Austria over a period of two years $5,000 monthly from a fund put up by Austrian bankers to fight communism. He also drew large sums from funds contributed to Dollfuss by Viennese Jews and the Vatican and used it to maintain Heimwehr troops."

Charges by Winkler Are Denied in Rome

Rome, Aug. 30 (AP).—Charges by Franz Winkler, former Austrian vice chancellor, that his native country is in the hands of Italy drew short and pointed answer here today.

"A lie, from beginning to end," an authoritative source termed Winkler's charges.

Declaring them "nothing more nor less than an expression of Winkler's bitterness," this source denied flatly that Premier Mussolini subsidized Prince Ernst von Starhemberg's Austrian Heimwehr.

Constable Trapped By Mitzi Mayfair

Mayfair told police she asked Hodges, who said he would be delighted. She informed him she would leave tickets for him at the box office, and continued to Washington with her mother.

Claimed Job Lost.

After the performance Monday, Miss Mayfair said, Hodges appeared backstage, and informed her and her mother that he had lost his job because he had not arrested them for speeding. He told her an official had been following his motorcycle and saw him release her, Miss Mayfair said.

Hodges informed the Mayfairs he had a wife and baby to support and did not know what to do. He asked their aid, Miss Mayfair asserted.

Both she and her mother promised to help Hodges all they could, Miss Mayfair said. They told him they had few connections here, but probably could land him a job in New York.

Hodges protested, according to Miss Mayfair, saying that he could not leave his wife and baby. They then suggested getting him a job with Warner Brothers, in Baltimore, but he told them he had a chance of being reinstated in his job.

Trap Is Laid.

"We then became convinced all he wanted was money," Miss Mayfair said.

Wednesday Miss Mayfair got in touch with authorities and Sergt. D. R. Peterson, of the Maryland State police, began an investigation.

With Detective Sergts. Elmer Lewis and H. E. Brody, he laid a trap outside the Earle, after having given Mrs. Mayfair a marked $10 bill to give Hodges. Hodges, according to the officers, accepted the bill. He was arrested as he left the stage door.

At headquarters Inspector F. S. W. Burke, chief of detectives, ordered Hodges to turn over the money he got from the Mayfairs, and he did so. He will be taken directly before the grand jury for a hearing this morning.

Dern Spurns House Demand That He Discharge Foulois

refusal of Dern to appear before the Military Committee. After several openly critical statements by the South Carolinian and other committeemen, Dern appeared before the group, but left after only brief testimony.

Members of the sub-committee of eight, all of whom voted unanimously for the removal of Foulois, intimated at the time their report was submitted that unless Secretary Dern complied with their request in this matter some difficulty might be encountered in gaining approval for expanded War Department appropriations.

Dern's letter to Rogers, however, left no doubt that the Secretary of War would stand by Foulois at least until some further action is taken by the committee.

This group, composed, besides Rogers, of Representatives Hill, of Alabama; Montet, of Louisiana; Harter, of Ohio, all Democrats, and James, of Michigan; Goss, of Connecticut; Plumley, of Vermont, all Republicans, and Kvale, Minnesota, Farmer-Laborite, is scheduled to resume hearings next month.

Foulois Reply Hampered.

Dern ended his letter with these words:

"With further assurance of my deep respect and of my desire to cooperate in the solution of this case to the fullest extent consistent with the dictates of fairness and justice, I await the committee's further action."

Dern indicated his letter was written at this time because he had just received a preliminary statement of reply from Foulois.

In this report Foulois declared he had been unable to secure access to the committee's records and was not, therefore, able to draw up a comprehensive reply to the committee's charges.

"A most difficult problem now confronts me," said Dern's epistle, "the solution of which involves some of the fundamental precepts of our system of jurisprudence, embodying many of the most sacred rights of American citizenship.

Guilty Without Trial.

"As a matter of course any recommendation of a committee of Congress would receive my most respectful attention. Our system of government requires it. Proper coordination demands it.

"Had the report of the committee been confined to an indictment or charges against Maj. Gen. Foulois, the situation would have presented no difficulty. In such event I could have followed the regular procedure prescribed for the determination of such matters by referring the case to a military tribunal for adjudication.

"Instead, however, the report is not limited to an indictment, but in effect finds the accused guilty, fixes the sentence and called on the Secretary of War to execute it. Under such circumstances should I now refer the matter to a military tribunal for the determination of the precise matters which your committee already has adjudged, such a step well might suggest a reflection on the committee.

Stands Behind General.

"Such a suggestion I desire most scrupulously to avoid. My respect for the members of the committee is only exceeded by my desire to work in complete harmony with them.

"Accordingly, had the report and recommendation of the committee been based on a full and complete hearing, wherein the constitutional rights of the accused were assured, even though the procedure were somewhat unusual, I would have felt constrained to comply with the mandate of the committee.

"But such was not the case. The hearings were conducted in the usual manner of Congressional hearings held in executive or closed session. Maj. Gen. Foulois appeared before the committee, but it was in the capacity of a witness and not of an accused. I understand that he was later given an opportunity to appear again before the committee before the report was submitted, but for some reason this did not eventuate.

His Rights Ignored.

"It does not appear that he was apprised of the accusations contained in the report, nor was he confronted by the witnesses against him and given an opportunity to hear their testimony and cross-examine them, and then offer evidence in his own defense. Nor was he permitted to be represented by counsel of his own choosing. All of these rights are sacred to every American citizen and are guaranteed by the Constitution.

Ritchie Men Hold Frederick Picnic

Conley Faction to Stage Barbecue September 8.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—A large crowd attended a picnic at Braddock Heights today under the auspices of the Junior Democratic Club, of Frederick County.

Practically all the 26 election districts of the county were represented. Attractions included races, a pie-eating contest, political derby and speedball game. A marathon race of 5 miles from Frederick to the top of the mountain was called off. Six boxing bouts between Hagerstown and Frederick amateur ringmen took place in the auditorium followed by dancing. The club is supporting Gov. Ritchie for reelection.

Plans are being made for an old-time barbecue by the Conley-for-Governor Club at the fair grounds on September 8. Two or three steers will be roasted. William J. Grove, a county Democratic leader, will preside and addresses will be made by Dr. Charles H. Conley, candidate for Governor; Alban C. Wood, candidate for State Senator on the Conley ticket; Samuel J. Lewis, former State's attorney, and others.

Federal Suit Here To Test NRA Code

the provisions of the graphic arts code applying to wages and hours.

The petition goes into considerable detail concerning the purposes of the recovery act. It declares that a National emergency "productive of widespread unemployment and disorganization of industry, which burdens interstate and foreign commerce, affects the public welfare and undermines the standards of living of the American people" exists.

"By violation and continuation of said violations defendant is attracting and will continue to attract to itself a large and increasing volume of business away from members of the graphic arts industry who abide by and comply with the provisions of the code, thus causing such members irreparable losses and damage," the suit charges.

The petition asks for a preliminary injunction and that upon hearing of the case a permanent injunction be granted.

The petition was accompanied by copies of the graphic arts code, copies of various NRA provisions and the affidavits of employes. It was attested by J. Ninian Bell, of the NRA legal division. John J. Wilson, assistant United States Attorney, is expected to handle the case in court.

Following filing of the suit Clyde M. Mills, president of the Columbia Typographical Union, declared that the cases of two employes discharged by the Roberts Co. would be taken to the National Labor Relations Board. The two discharged men are Robert E. Markley and Junior Kinlaw, who are members of the union. Mills said they had signed affidavits in support of the suit.

Beltsville Gets All Field Work

Agriculture Department Concentrates Research Activities.

The concentration of virtually all field experimental work of the Department of Agriculture at the farm at Beltsville, Md., was ordered yesterday by Secretary Wallace as the first step in a program to develop it as the most completely equipped plant in the country for the study of agriculture.

The Secretary formally designated the field activities at Beltsville and at Bell, Md., as the "Beltsville Research Center of the Department of Agriculture" and named Dr. E. N. Bresman as temporary director. This brings under one administrative head most of the field activities in this vicinity.

Already 10 bureaus of the Department are conducting or planning activities on the 4,500-acre tract about 15 miles northeast of the Capital. Additional buildings will be required to house activities to be shifted to this area. The new buildings will augment those which have been constructed in the past few years as part of the Department's regular program and more recently under an emergency works program to stimulate employment.

Eventually, it is expected, many of the activities at the Arlington Experimental Farm will be relocated at Beltsville.

The farm was started several years ago as a place where the Bureau of Animal Industry could keep animals required for its research. Now the area has developed until it has become a practical laboratory for many fields of agriculture. In recent years the Department has increased its cooperative work with many of the State experimental stations, and it has also served as a place for comparing results in cattle feeding throughout the country.

Girl Kills Parents Protecting Mother

Same Bullet Ends Lives of Wife Beater, Victim.

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Fifteen-year-old Anna Maietta and her six brothers and sisters were without mother or father today. Anna killed them both in a desperate attempt to protect the mother from a beating.

One of the four bullets she fired into her father's body last night penetrated into that of the mother. The mother, Mrs. Jennie Maietta, 38, died instantly. James, 43, the father, died today at a hospital.

In her bed at the Juvenile Detention Home Anna was inconsolable in her grief for her mother. She turned her face to the wall and refused to listen to the comforting words of matrons.

Fredericksburg Park Group To Welcome National Director

Battlefield Association Will Give Banquet on Sept. 21.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Officially welcoming Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, and other National park officials, the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park Association will conduct a banquet September 21 in the first association ceremony since the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Battlefield Park was transferred to the Interior Department last year.

Dr. H. C. Bryant, the principal speaker, will give an illustrated lecture on the aims and works of the local park. Other prominent guests will be Representative Otis S. Bland, proponent of the bill which authorized establishment of the park, and Howard Smith. Arrangements are in charge of Frank M. Chichester.

The day's program will consist of an official tour of the entire park area, visiting spots of historic significance, and a reception at Brompton, on Marye's Heights, scene of much of the action in the Battle of Fredericksburg. The banquet at the Stratford will follow at 7 p. m.

The Kiwanis, Rotary, and other civic clubs have agreed to cooperate. The ceremonies have been arranged with the idea of acquainting Fredericksburg residents with the park officials and of giving citizens a more extensive knowledge of the work and future plans of the park association.

The gathering will mark the third public ceremony in the history of the park, although the first since its transfer from jurisdiction of the War Department. Previous occasions were the dedication, when President Coolidge was the guest of honor, and the opening of the park's roads, when Representative Bland officiated.

Germany to Clarify New Criminal Code

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP).—Nazi Germany's new penal code will be so written that the man in the street will have no trouble understanding it, Dr. Franz Guenther, minister of justice, said today.

Execution on the block will remain the heaviest punishment under the new code, the minister said, explaining that proposals to allow condemned criminals to commit suicide had been voted down.

Lumber Firm Enjoined To Observe NRA Prices

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 30 (AP).—Federal District Judge J. A. Donohoe today granted a permanent injunction restraining the Canfield Lumber Co. from violating the NRA code by selling lumber and other material at less than cost as computed under the industry's code.

The decision, which also directly upheld the constitutionality of the NRA act, was hailed by State NRA Director H. T. Williamson as a step that will make NRA enforcement in Nebraska much easier.

15,000 Cheer Ritchie Arrival At Baltimore

Executive Says He Is 'Fit' for State Duties and Campagin Work.

land," light artillery guns boomed out a 19-gun salute, and several companies of Maryland's "Dandy Fifth" Regiment, in colorful dress, snapped to attention.

Gov. Ritchie was home again and apparently was deeply affected by the reception given him. Waiting for the Governor was Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, his hand outstretched in welcome and a big smile on his face. Mayor Jackson two weeks ago withdrew as the chief challenger to Gov. Ritchie's desire to be renominated for a fifth term.

Discusses Politics.

Almost as soon as his train crossed from Washington into Maryland, the Governor turned his attention to the current political campaign. The primary election which will settle the contest over the Democratic gubernatorial nomination between him and Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Freedrick, is but 12 days off.

State Insurance Commissioner William C. Walsh, Democratic leader of Allegany County, boarded the train at Washington and with him the Governor spent the trip to Baltimore discussing the party situation in Western Maryland.

In his responding speech at the open air meeting at Mount Royal Station, Governor Ritchie said the occasion was no time to talk politics but he took cognizance of whispers that he is an ill man which, it is reported here, his foes have spread about the State. The Governor's appearance is a refutation of these reports. He has not looked so well in several years, a fact which speakers and spectators commented on.

"No Mystery" in Trip.

Governor Ritchie said, "there never was any occasion for any mystery or whispering about my trip abroad.

"I took it because I needed a rest and I got a rest," he continued. "If there is anyone around who does not think a rest will do you good when you need it let him come around and talk to me."

The Governor said he came back feeling "fine and fit for anything that my job expects of me and anything necessary in my campaign." He praised Mayor Jackson, warmly thanked him for his words of welcome and told his huge audience that it had "filled his heart with happiness and gratitude."

Before continuing to Annapolis tonight, the Governor learned from the Baltimore Democratic leaders the situation in that city and the developments since his departure early in July.

Gov. Ritchie left Richmond at noon by automobile for Washington, boarding the 4 p. m. train for Baltimore. As the train arrived in Baltimore a squadron of five Maryland National Guard airplanes gave it an aerial escort to the Baltimore & Ohio tunnel.

As the State's chief executive stepped from the train, a large crowd, which had managed to force itself into the station, let go a mighty yell of "Yea, Ritchie"—a signal for the cheering to start outside and for the 110th Field Artillery, which stood ready to give the resounding salute.

As the Governor walked through the station between rows of saluting Baltimore police, accompanied by a reception committee and Police Commissioner Charles Gaither, military commands rang out, bringing the companies of the "Dandy Fifth" to attention. Attired in their Colonial uniforms of gray and black braid, with white cross stripes and black pom-poms on their helmets, the troops presented arms. The afternoon sun was reflected from the gold epaulets and braid and the swords of the officers, while the chill breeze fluttered the white plumes on their helmets.

The Fifth Regiment Band, in red-and-black uniforms, and the St. Mary's Industrial School Band struck up the State anthem and the crowd roared its approval. The Governor mounted a temporary stand which had been set up in front of the old graystone station.

Overhead the squadron of airplanes let go an aerial bomb, which unloosed a National flag and the Maryland colors.

Political Chiefs Present.

The speaker's stand, surrounded by flowers and ferns, was crowded with political personages as the Governor was pushed to the front. A huge floral piece made up in the form of the municipal flag was the gift of the Maryland Club, the most exclusive organization in the State.

Maj. Gen. Paul B. Malone, commander of the Third Corps Army area, called the meeting to order. He said it was his privilege to welcome back to Maryland "one of the outstanding characters in America." He introduced Bishop Edward T. Helfenstein, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, to deliver the invocation.

Bishop Helfenstein, as did Rabbi William Rosenau and Mgr. Harry A. Quinn, of the Catholic Cathedral, who also were on the program later, eulogized Gov. Ritchie and sounded notes of thanksgiving for his safe return to Maryland.

Howard Bruce, Democratic National committeeman, took charge of the meeting and said he was "thrilled" by the appearance of the Governor and the turnout to welcome him. He said Mr. Ritchie looked like "he is ready for another 15 years governing this State." He asserted one reason why men wanted to hold public office in Maryland was because the people, as illustrated by the gathering, "appreciated sincere, devoted, concientious service."

Greeted by Mayor.

Mr. Bruce presented Mayor Jackson as "a great sportsman." The mayor said he had wished the Governor well when he left and that now he was pleased to find the trip had been so beneficial to the chief executive. He added he was glad the Governor had come home and that the people of Baltimore were happy at his return, "with your old time energy and good health restored."

The Governor in his response said that only one other occasion had made a deeper impression on him and that was when he returned from the Democratic convention in Chicago in 1932 "without the bacon." On that occasion, every available inch of space in the Mount Royal bowl was jammed by a yelling, cheering mob. There were not so many present today.

Following the meeting at the railroad station, the Governor, the Mayor, State and municipal officials rode in open automobiles to the Hotel Belvedere, escorted by the "Dandy Fifth" and blaring bands. Behind was a parade of Baltimore political clubs. Approximately 5,000 persons lined the short route of the parade in addition to those at the station.

Arrived at the hotel, the Governor reviewed the troops and paraders and later held a reception which lasted almost an hour. After this, Mr. Ritchie went into conference with some of his political aids. His plans over the week-end remain indefinite.

Annapolis Prepares To Welcome Ritchie

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Annapolis is planning a fitting reception to Gov. Ritchie, who will arrive in the city about 5:30 p. m. tomorrow afternoon.

The movement, sponsored by Philip Miller, business man and Democratic candidate for reelection to the House of Delegates, was taken up by municipal officials, and tonight the city council adopted resolutions felicitating the executive on his return, as well as his fifty-eighth birthday anniversary, which was today.

Mill Clashes Feared In Walkout Centers

New England Operators Say They Will Open Plants Tuesday.

Boston, Aug. 30 (AP).—New England, scene of one of the Nation's greatest labor disputes 22 years ago, the bloody Lawrence textile strike, tensely awaits the hour next Saturday when the United Textile Workers of America strike.

Labor leaders declared 150,000 operatives and their families in New England will be affected by the scheduled cotton workers' walkout.

In addition, they viewed the union's executive committee's mandate to silk, rayon and woolen workers to "stand by" as meaning 100,000 more may join the strikers' ranks.

A spokesman for the operators expressed belief most of the mills in this area would open as usual Tuesday morning and the regular employes would be free to go to work if they chose.

Union officials at Fall River, Mass., one of the largest cotton textile centers of the country; New Bedford, Mass.; the Pawtucket and Central Falls area of Rhode Island; Manchester, N. H., and Burlington, Vt., as well as northeastern Connecticut—which are the main centers of the industry in New England—reported they were organized for the walkout.

Joseph Sylvia, strike director for the section, announced meetings of the Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut local union committees for Saturday and Sunday at the regional headquarters to take definite action on the situation.

Burlington, Vt., recently recovered from a local strike of six weeks' duration, may be the first of the New England centers to go out, Louis J. Guillmet, Vermont strike director, said today, adding that Burlington workers might be called out Saturday morning.

The Fall River Textile Council of the U. T. W., already on record in favor of the strike, issued a statement ordering the strike effective on Saturday night and voicing the hope that mills would close in order to prevent the necessity of establishing picket lines.

While Massachusetts will bear the brunt of the strike, Maine probably will be least affected. Reports from the Lewiston and Biddeford areas show that little organizing has been done among the 11,000 workers of the State. The employes themselves, reports state, are adverse to striking.

South Is Apprehensive; Many Workers May Defy Strike Order.

Charlotte, N. C., Aug. 30 (AP).—An apprehensive South, not unused to picket lines, armed guards and business upheaval which accompany labor unrest, girded itself tonight for what threatened to be the greatest strike in its history.

Two classes of persons most directly interested, aside from the manufacturers and the strikers themselves, looked upon the prospect as one verging on disaster.

They were the business men, who foresee a loss of the substantial gains they have made in the last 18 months, and the nonunion men, nonsympathizing textile workers. Of the latter, some saw their jobs go glimmering against their will, while others, determined to remain at work, feared the clashes their decision might bring.

Half Million in Carolinas.

At conservative estimate, a half-million persons in the Carolinas alone found themselves vitally affected by today's call for the starting of the strike at 11:30 p. m., Saturday. This is exclusive of additional thousands who would feel the indirect force of the walkout through its effect on general business.

Making no comment regarding the issues involved, Willard Dowell, executive secretary of the North Carolina Merchants Association, described the strike as a "severe blow." He said such a strike would more than "offset any advantage which might inure to this State by virtue of prevailing and anticipated prices for tobacco," and would prove the greatest retarding influence recovering business has encountered.

From the textile workers' standpoint, there were two widely divergent views. Throughout the textile area telegrams went forward to National strike headquarters, pledging 100 per cent support of the strike program.

Greenville Workers Protest.

At other places, however, notably around Greenville, S. C., one of the world's largest cotton mill centers, workers were pledging their loyalty to employers and expressing determination not to join the strikers under any circumstances. Approximately 1,500 signed such pledges in Greenville today, and similar action has been reported completed or under way at other points.

Gaston County, N. C., which calls itself the "combed yarn center of the world," was quiet as the strike call came down from Washington. Labor organization activities there have been soft-pedaled since 1929, when the National Textile Workers Union's bloody strike attracted world attention and sent seven Communists fleeing to Russia from murder convictions.

Labor leaders have claimed the United Textile Workers had organized 12,000 of the county's 25,000 workers, but mill executives expressed the belief the union membership was between 4,000 and 5,000. One of the largest plants, center of the 1929 disturbances, is the Loray mill of the Manville-Jenckes Co.

Gaston's Mills to Run.

Almost without exception, mill superintendents said Gaston's mills would run Monday in the face of the strike call. Labor Day has never been observed as a holiday there.

Charlotte labor leaders professed thorough preparation for the strike. They claimed many mills were fully organized. And cited an increase in membership of 400 in the past week as evidence of the strike urge in textile ranks.

Meanwhile, trouble has already broken out at one point. National Guardsmen patrolled the premises of the Lonsdale mill at Seneca, S. C., driving away hundreds of pickets and allowing machinists to prepare the plant for reopening after a lay-off of some weeks.

American Federation of Labor leaders cooperated fully with textile union leaders, and conferences were being held throughout the South seeking to effect a complete close-down of the area's chief industry.

Textile Strike Tomorrow as Peace Fails

Nation-Wide Walkout to Affect 250,000 Workers in Industry.

previously declined an invitation to confer jointly with union officials and the labor board.

Despite the collapse of negotiations, indications were that Garrison would appoint a neutral committee representing his board, the Labor Department and NRA to attempt mediation after the walkout actually begins.

Prospects for intervention by President Roosevelt faded, although he was known to be keeping in close touch with developments.

Indications were that the strike would develop into the most potent display of industrial unrest since the advent of the New Deal. Mills governed by the cotton textile code—the first pact approved by NRA—spread from Maine to Alabama.

Reports that violence was feared in some areas, particularly in the South, led Gorman to reiterate his men would remain peaceful "unless the employers start something with their hired thugs, masquerading as private detectives."

Gorman Gives Order.

Dozens of union officials, newspapermen and photographers huddled about a telegraph instrument in the strike headquarters in the Carpenters' Building, Tenth and K streets northwest, as the hour for issuance of the walk-out instructions approached.

Gorman stepped forward and signaled for attention. Photographers' bulbs flashed and reporters reached for telephones.

"Fellow trade unionists," Gorman began, "I am about to hand to Robert T. Shearly, a Postal telegraph operator and member of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, a telegram which will go to 500 local unions of cotton textile workers, putting the cotton strike into effect Nationally at 11:33 p. m. Saturday night, September 1.

"We have exhausted every resource in the direction of peaceful settlement.

"We have been met, I am sorry to say, by an arrogance on the part of the employers that is amazing in this day and year. There are, we know, many employers who disagree with the policy of the Cotton Textile Institute almost as much as we do, but they are powerless for the present.

"This telegram will call a half million workers to the strike lines. Not all of those are now employed. The stretch-out, which adds to the machine load per worker until he can bear no more, has robbed thousands of their chance to work.

"But every man and woman will rally to the strike lines and the great cotton textile industry will not move a wheel or a thread after the hour set to stop the mills."

Gorman added that the strike was directed against the management of the industry.

"The Cotton Textile Institute," he said, "can find nothing better to say in answer to our demands than to accuse us of striking against the Government. Surely the Government does not own the mills. They are privately owned, mostly by big corporations.

"I know the American people will not allow these mill owners to hide their exploitation behind a cloak of Government protection. If the mills supported the Government's policy there would be no need for a strike."

Fight With Reds Forecast.

The actual strike message read:

"Strike of all cotton textile workers will begin at 11:30 o'clock your time Saturday night. Put all previous instructions into effect. Wool, silk, rayon and synthetic yarn membership stand by for further orders. Victory through solidarity."

Officials conceded the full effect of the tie-up probably would not be felt until Tuesday as the Labor Day holiday intervenes.

The Boston American, in a copyright article, the Associated Press reported, predicted the strike would be marked by a spectacular battle for control between Communists and Gorman's organization, the United Textile Workers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor.

Concerning that phase, Gorman commented:

"We have instructed our people to be orderly at all times, not to associate with Communists and to stamp out communistic uprisings when they occur."

Gorman insisted sufficient funds to meet all union demands could be raised if the manufacturers "would add 4 cents to the price of a $1.50 shirt."

News dispatches disclosed workers in some localities already have walked out. The largest premature strike involved 1,000 employes of the Bibb Manufacturing Co. in Macon, Ga.

Regional strike headquarters will be established in Providence, R. I.; Greenville, S. C.; Cohoes, N. Y., and Philadelphia.

Green Asserts Workers Face Severe Winter

10,772,000 Jobless in U.S. He Says, Outstripping Supply of Places.

The demand for jobs is outracing the supply and a dark winter is ahead for the working man, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said last night.

America must retrench for a fall business revival if it does not want to lose all gains and slip back into the slough of the depression, he warned. From October, 1933, to June, 1934, the number of persons looking for work increased by 300,000, Green said, while the number of jobs available showed a gain of only 100,000.

Green said that Donald Richberg, head of the President's recovery council, was correct when he reported that the New Deal put 2,300,000 persons back to work last year. He added that organized labor was grateful.

Skipped Present Situation.

"Mr. Richberg did not, however, discuss the present unemployment problem," Green said, "or suggest methods for putting the unemployed to work. Two important facts should be considered in reviewing the achievements of NRA in reemployment:

"First, practically all of those who went back to work were reemployed between June and October, 1933; there have been no significant employment gains since.

"Second, there is a constant growth in the population seeking gainful work because the number of young people coming of age for work is larger than the number leaving their jobs because of old age or death.

"It is estimated that over 1,000,000 young persons who are without work are roaming the country, seeking jobs and becoming a nomad group. Others are idle at home. They are so affected by constant idleness in this formative period of their lives that many of them probably never will be able to do sustained work or hold a steady position."

Green said that when those factors were taken into consideration the actual decrease in the number of unemployment was "scarcely more than 1,000,000."

11 Million Jobless.

The American Federation of Labor estimates there are now 10,772,000 persons without normal employment. That includes those working on Government projects of a strictly emergency character, such as:

Public works, 612,000; Civilian Conservation Corps, 363,000; emergency relief, 1,156,000.

Board Seeking Early Wierton Union Decision

New National Group Is Given Initial Case for Settlement.

(Associated Press.)

A quick decision on the right of Weirton Steel Co. employes to determine who shall represent them in collective bargaining—one of the biggest storm clouds hovering over the labor situation—was sought yesterday from the new National Steel Labor Relations Board.

In the first petition filed with the board since its creation by the recent Congress, certain employes of the West Virginia company asked that an election be called to ascertain their will in the matter of representation.

They would decide whether to be represented by the company union, which the Government contends was formed by the employers through coercion, or by a union such as those belonging to the American Federation of Labor.

The board promised to make an inquiry and, if the facts justify, to require that an election be held.

Case Now Transferred.

This action transfers this part of the prolonged dispute between the Government and Weirton officials from the Justice Department to the Labor Board.

Consequently, the Justice Department yesterday withdrew the elections issue from its case against the Weirton company in the Federal District Court at Wilmington, Del., where it has been pending for months.

Under an amended bill, the Government still contends that "the company employe representation plan was organized by the defendant in anticipation of the adoption of the iron and steel code," and that "it was imposed upon the employes by coercion and other unlawful means for the purpose of circumventing their rights to choose their own representatives and to bargain collectively."

The Government seeks to restrain the company "from continuing such imposition and circumvention," because of the company's refusal to hold an election as asked by NRA, and its throwing of the case into the courts, the case has attracted as much attention as any other under NRA.

Hearing on the application for a permanent injunction against the company had been set by the Delaware court for September 5. Because of the change in status, however, the Justice Department said it would be postponed for perhaps 60 to 90 days.

Colpoys Requires Deputies to Wear Uniforms on Duty

Natty, double-breasted blue uniforms will be worn by the deputies attached to the staff of United States Marshal John B. Colpoys beginning with the middle of September.

Colpoys yesterday sent around an order requiring all of his deputies, some 50 men and women, to equip themselves with the uniforms by September 15—the expenses to be borne by the deputies.

In addition, brass buttons are to be used and the insignia "U. S. M." is to adorn the left breast pocket. It is the first attempt to place the marshals under a unified plan of attire.

The movement, sponsored by Philip Miller, business man and Democratic candidate for reelection to the House of Delegates, was taken up by municipal officials, and tonight the city council adopted resolutions felicitating the executive on his return, as well as his fifty-eighth birthday anniversary, which was today.

Dall Children Threatened in KidnapingNote

Letter Asking $168,000 Jails Former Officer of U. S. Navy.

a member of the Broadway "strong arm" squad, was named as the arresting officer. It was not revealed what part he took in the investigation.

Broderick gained fame on New York's "dress suit" squad, a detail assigned to society parties and hotels. He is highly respected in gangland, where he is spoken of as "Tough Johnny," and pointed out as the man who collared "Two-Gun" Crowley after hours of police seige.

Kidnaping of Children Long Feared by Mother

The Dall children are with their father, Curtis B. Dall, at the home of Spencer Aldrich, a friend of Mr. Dall, who lives at Bay Shore, Long Island, it was disclosed last night at the White House.

Since Mrs. Dall gave the temporary custody of the children to Mr. Dall at Chicago several weeks ago the children have been visiting many of his friends. Until their trip to Long Island, White House attaches had not heard from them since they were visiting in Wisconsin.

All White House attaches expressed amazement at the purported attempt to extort money from the President's family, and professed to know nothing of the threatening letters. Miss Mollie Dorf, secretary to Mrs. Dall, said she knew nothing of the threats and referred questioners to Mrs. Dall, who is at the family home in Hyde Park, N. Y.

Thomas A. Quinn, acting chief of the Department of Justice Bureau of Investigation, announced that the investigation had been handled entirely by the Secret Service, which is charged with the responsibility of protecting the President and his family.

Handled in New York.

The case was handled by the New York office of the Secret Service, it was announced by William H. Moran, chief of the Service.

"Several days ago," he said, "we received information of the extortion attempt and the case was turned over to our New York office. I have had no report from them."

The children's parents were divorced at Minden, Nev., on July 30. The divorce was obtained on the ground of cruelty. The custody of the children and a settlement of property rights were determined in a private agreement.

After their marriage June 5, 1926, at Hyde Park, the couple lived together until last year, when Mr. Dall remained in New York and Mrs. Dall came to Washington with her parents.

In June, while Mrs. Dall was living in Nevada to establish her residence preliminary to securing the divorce, there were reports that she feared her children might be kidnaped. Since then a watchful guard has been kept over them.

During the Nevada stay, she was quoted as saying:

"My one thought is that no fanatic or kidnaper gets the children."

Recently Mrs. Dall signed a contract to make radio talks for a New York department store and is also a magazine contributor.

'Sistie,' 'Buzzie' Guarded At Long Island Estate

Bayshore, Long Island, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—"Sistie" and "Buzzie" Dall were sleeping peacefully at the estate of Spencer Aldrich here tonight entirely unaware of any plot to kidnap them.

Members of the Aldrich household said Dall was "out," but would return later tonight. He had not been informed of any attempt against his son and daughter.

One or more Federal agents are on the Aldrich estate guarding the children, it was said. They are in care of their nurse, their paternal grandmother, an aunt and other relatives.

The Dall children have been on the Aldrich estate for "some time," a member of the household said, and will remain for "at least several days longer." They then will go to Hyde Park to rejoin their mother.

Both children are well and "having a fine time" with their father.

Bertil Betrothal To Juliana Is Officially Denied

Amsterdam, Aug. 30 (AP).—Rumors that the engagement of 25-year-old Princess Juliana to Prince Bertil of Sweden will soon be announced were officially denied tonight. A telegram from Swedish court authorities received here said the reports were unfounded.

Nevertheless, The Netherlands continued to play a guessing game, induced by the persistence of reports that the young princess' engagement would be made public soon.

With the 22-year-old Swedish prince ruled out as future consort, some quarters guessed that Prince Carl Johan of Sweden might be the choice, though he is only 18.

At one time it was thought the announcement of the engagement would be made tomorrow, the queen's birthday anniversary.

It was pointed out the queen has not returned from her holiday in Norway, and also that Dutch usage requires such an announcement be accompanied by an act of Parliament passing on a question of the nationality of the prospective consort and setting a marriage date. Parliament will not meet until September 18.

Julian Gives Up Politics, Keeps Treasurer Job

Resigns as Committeeman From Ohio on Order of Morgenthau.

(Associated Press.)

With the resignation yesterday of William A. Julian as Democratic National committeeman from Ohio, Secretary Morgenthau virtually cleared his department of key men who also hold political positions.

Julian is treasurer of the United States. His withdrawal from the committee membership was in response to Morgenthau's order that by September 1, all such dual officeholders should relinquish one job or the other.

It left Guy T. Helvering, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, still chairman of the Kansas State Democratic committee, with one day in which to act. Plans are made for his resignation from his party post.

Morgenthau's order, issued on May 21, was linked with President Roosevelt's denunciation, early in the year, of lawyer members of the Democratic National committee practicing and pressing claims before various governmental agencies here.

The President left no doubt of how he regarded such activities with their implication that the committee members indulging in them were exerting political pressure on behalf of their clients.

The outstanding example of a Government official holding a political post continues in both jobs. He is Postmaster General Farley, who is chairman of the National Committee. He has asked the President to relieve him of the committee job and a change awaits Mr. Roosevelt's decision as to a successor.

N. Y. Department Store Cancels $176,436 Debt

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Hearn department store announced in newspaper advertisements today it had canceled customers' debts aggregating $176,436.88. Earlier this week the firm said it would discontinue all dividends for one year, in order to lower prices and stimulate buying.

"Several thousand people owe us for debts incurred on time payments prior to two years ago," the announcement read. "To them we say: 'Forget it!'"

Letter Never Reached Summer White House

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—President and Mrs. Roosevelt expressed surprise tonight at the arrest of a man charged with threatening them, and the Secret Service explained to newspapermen that the letter never reached the Summer White House and was handled in routine from Washington.

President Says East Has Stake In Aid to West

New Deal Plan Defined as One to Undo Past Mistakes.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 30.—President Roosevelt today told approximately 1,000 Dutchess County neighbors, gathered to do him honor, that the East has a "very definite stake" in the reconstruction of the West, since both are paying for "mistakes of the past."

Defining the New Deal farm program as one to "undo" those mistakes, he expressed pride in the way all are cooperating "in a big program that has nothing to do with party and nothing to do with section," but is "trying to be square to all."

For half an hour the President stood on a platform, in a grove of trees, telling in warm fashion his fellow Hyde Park citizens of his recent trip, his joy to be home, and of their "stake" in the rehabilitation of the Nation.

"If a farm family is on the verge of starvation in North Dakota," he told them, "we people in the town of Hyde Park are helping to pay to keep that family from actual starvation; if we have made mistakes in the settling of the country in the past, we have got to pay to correct those mistakes."

Declaring that "you have heard me often talk about things growing up like Topsy," Mr. Roosevelt said that "a great deal of land was taken by people from the East and from the Middle West and put into cultivation—land that never ought to have been cultivated."

"And so," he continued, "we are engaged as a Nation in undoing mistakes of the past, rectifying them so that in the future we won't be paying so much of a penalty for those mistakes as we are paying today."

Further along in his discourse, which stressed the unity of the United States, Mr. Roosevelt asserted:

"Most of us, the great majority, see the country as a whole, see that unless we help to raise other people, they are going to drag us down. Most of us are very willing to bear our share and to work for the attainment of the National objective."

The speech, which was impromptu, was delivered at an open-air gathering of the Roosevelt Home Club, organized in 1929, when Mr. Roosevelt first became Governor of New York State. Only members and their families were invited to the meeting, which consisted of a "welcome-home" program.

Called on for a talk, the President began by professing to consider the Norris amendment a great mistake, since it continued "the old, pernicious practice of having Congress sit in Washington all through the lovely springtime."

This means that "for another two springs"—he said this with a twinkle in his eye—he will have to stay in Washington instead of Hyde Park.

"When I got back on Sunday," Mr. Roosevelt went on, intimately, "one of my neighbors gave me a very great shock—came up and shook hands and looked at me and said 'my, how fleshy you have got.'"

After the laughter had subsided, he continued:

"And then to cap the climax one of these people—special writers (I think they call them columnists or something like that)—made the assertion that I put on 12 pounds. Well, I resent it. But, of course, you cannot quarrel with the press.

"I did gain 2 pounds—and I came up here with the perfectly serious intention of taking off 5. But there is a certain quality to Dutchess County milk and my mother's cooking, and the air that you breathe; I don't believe I am going to make good my objective."

Goodwin, Post Staff Photographer.

Luray Lawyer G. O. P. Choice In House Fight

J. Everett Will to Oppose Robertson in Seventh Virginia District.

By C. B. Carr.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 30.—After adopting a platform in which it was declared that the National Government is under the control of a "party of changing principles," which is foreign to Virginia nature, Republicans of the Seventh Virginia Congressional District in convention here today nominated J. Evarett Will, Luray attorney, as their candidate for the House of Representatives. He will oppose Representative A. Willis Robertson, Lexington Democrat, at the polls in November.

Prolonged applause came from the convention floor as half a dozen speakers denounced the "Brain Trust" of the Roosevelt Administration, the "regimentation" of American agriculture and industry, and declared Senator Carter Glass, Virginia Democrat, was right when he said the "New Deal is not only a mistake, but a disgrace to the Nation."

John W. Morrison, member of the House of Delegates from Rockingham County and chairman of the Seventh District Republican committee, was named temporary chairman of the convention and, in a brief address, made a plea for revival of the "rugged individualism" for which the Republican party stood.

Morrison Issues Warning.

Morrison warned the Republicans of the danger of the growing bureaucracy of the Federal Government, especially warning the agricultural classes that the day may not be far distant when the farmer may not be the judge of whether or not he may plow his own field or sell his own live stock.

H. B. McCormac, Winchester, chairman of the Republican State central committee, was named permanent chairman of the convention. On succeeding Morrison, he made a brief talk, in the course of which he declared he "hopes that out of these deliberations will come a reflection of sentiment and purpose to realize that there is still a form of constitutional Government in the United States."

McCormac also expressed the hope that the bureaucracy of the present Administration would not be made permanent. He said he considered the coming election the most important since 1861, in that the November polls would serve as an opportunity for the people to express a mandate to the Federal Government that much temporary legislation of the present Administration should not be made permanent.

Prior to the nominations for the post as Congressional standard bearer, Mrs. W. H. Logan, Woodstock, chairman of the Republican Woman's Club of the Seventh District; Howard Zeigler, Timberville, former Rockingham member of the House of Delegates, and Joe Hutcheson, Woodstock, member of the House of Delegates from Shenandoah County, pointed out what they called the growing sentiment of the public" toward Republican party principles.

Four Put in Nomination.

Four persons were placed in nomination for the Congressional nomination. They were D. Wampler Earman, Harrisonburg, Commonwealth attorney for Rockingham County; Howard S. Zeigler, Timberville orchardist; J. Edward Will, Luray attorney, and W. C. Deming, Warren County Republican, chairman, of Front Royal.

Earman and Zeigler withdrew from the race. Demings, asking that his nomination be withdrawn, moved that Will be nominated by acclamation. The motion was carried.

Accepting the nomination, Will promised he would "worry Robertson (the Democratic candidate) to death in the Seventh District." He declared he was "absolutely opposed to the stuff they have tried to pull over on us the past two years."

Will is a native of Shenandoah County, Va. He served with the State Department during the Coolidge Administration, and under the Hoover Administration was an attorney for the Mexican Claims Commission. He is now practicing law at Luray.

A reorganization of the Seventh District was made at the convention. John W. Morrison, Harrisonburg, was reelected chairman of the Republican district committee, and W. H. Ellifritts, Strasburg, secretary. District committee members include J. D. Harpine, Shenandoah County; A. S. Will, Page; H. E. Colner, Augusta; W. D. Austin, Rockbridge; W. R. Lineweaver, Frederick; E. A. Lindsay, Clarke; A. F. Johnson, Bath; C. S. Estep, Rockingham; W. C. Deming, Warren, and Dr. B. T. Swecker, Highland.

The Seventh District includes the cities of Winchester, Staunton, Harrisonburg and Buena Vista and counties of Amherst, Augusta, Bath, Clarke, Rappahannock, Shenandoah, Warren, Frederick, Highland, Nelson, Page, Rockingham and Rockbridge. Rappahannock, Amherst and Nelson Counties were not represented at today's convention.

Nomination Well Received.

Norfolk, Aug. 30 (Spl.).—L. C. Page, Republican nominee for the United States Senate in November, will make his first public appearance as a candidate before the party convention at Roanoke Saturday, when a candidate for Congress will be named to oppose Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, Democrat, in the Sixth District.

Page, who conferred last night with National Committeeman Joseph L. Crupper, Arlington County, indicated he would not make a set speech or outline his plan of campaign until after a meeting of the platform committee, headed by Henry W. Anderson, Richmond. He plans to make speeches all over the State later on.

Crupper said the nomination of Page had been well received by Republicans throughout the State and that the party would be united behind him.

The Rev. Roland J. Moncure, rector of St. Paul's Church in Salem, Va., will preach at 11 a. m. and 3 p. m. He will use the prayer book originally used when the church, the oldest in northern Virginia, was built, in 1757.

Virginia Liquor Board Renews Hotel Hearing

Old Point Resort Raises Federal Jurisdiction Question.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (Spl.).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, which yesterday revoked the license of the Hotel Chamberlin-Vanderbilt at Old Point to sell wine and beer, today consented to a request of the hotel management to reopen the issue at a hearing tomorrow at 11 a. m., at the State A. B. C. offices here.

The board's action in revoking the permit was taken following a report from its inspection division that the hotel was circulating a cocktail price list among its guests.

At a hearing held by the board the hotel contended that, since it was on Federal property and held a Federal license to dispense hard liquors, it was not bound by State regulations.

Meanwhile, J. Wesley Gardner, manager of the hotel, has stated that the order of the board will not stop the sale of either soft or hard drinks.

Officials of the Federal Alcoholic Control Administration in Washington today said that there was no such thing as a Federal license to sell liquors, wines and beers. These licenses are issued only by the States, they said.

The Federal tax stamp, a receipt for an occupational tax, does not give the holder the right to violate a State law, they said.

The FACA officials, however, admitted that this is a new situation for the FACA, since it has never before faced the question of control of the sale of liquors, &c., by a private enterprise on a Government reservation.

They promised to go into the case at once, adding that it might resolve into a question to be decided by the legal department of the United States Army and the Department of Justice.

Board Revokes Control Order In Milk Fight

Charlottesville Area Gets Respite Until Law Undergoes Test.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—The State milk commission announced tonight that it had canceled all regulations affecting producers and distributors in the Charlottesville area pending another meeting of the commission.

A spokesman said the regulations had been canceled "due to a misunderstanding relative to the meeting held July 27," when questions involved in the Charlottesville area were considered.

"Due notice" will be given, he said, of the meeting of the commission at which the new regulations will be considered.

In Charlottesville today Circuit Court Judge A. B. Dabney held on the docket an application of local dairymen for an injunction restraining the State from enforcing milk regulations for the area until the constitutionality of the milk act had been tested in a higher court.

Can't Grant Injunction.

The court said the injunction could not be granted because there was no evidence that proceedings would be brought against violators of the law.

"I have very grave doubts about the constitutionality of the law," said Judge Dabney at one stage of the proceedings this morning.

"If the attorney general will agree not to enter any action against us until the constitutionality of the law is settled, we will be satisfied," said Homer Richey, attorney for the independents.

Attorney General A. P. Staples replied that if any action were taken the local court would be notified. In consequence, Judge Dabney allowed the bill for injunction to remain on the docket.

The burden of action now rests upon the State and it appeared this afternoon that the commission would have to move for prosecution of some individual to break the lock against the act here. The independents apparently have no idea of compromising until the Staunton case gets the review of the Virginia Supreme Court.

See Damage Under Law.

At the hearing this morning, Judge Dabney expressed belief that less harm would be done by letting conditions here remain as they are for the next 30 to 90 days, until the supreme court can decide the status of the law.

Mr. Richey and associates in the case, Claude Yardley and David Wood, insisted enforcement now would mean "irreparable damage" to their clients.

Mr. Staples and his assistant, Maj. E. H. Gibson, repeatedly said no action had been taken by them and none was contemplated at the present time.

Maj. Gibson and Mr. Richey fell into a sharp tilt over whether the meeting held in Richmond July 27 was legal. The assistant attorney general declared local producers had plenty of time in which to form their case. Mr. Richey maintained only two days notice was given.

Pathologist Discovers Means Of Checking 'Apple Measles'

Morgantown, W. Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—What is regarded as an important discovery in a long battle against "apple measles" has been made by Anthony Berg, associate plant pathologist at West Virginia University.

It is the source of a certain type of the measles that has been spreading among trees in this State the last several years, a parasitic fungus to which Mr. Berg has given the name of "black pox."

This type of fungus first made its appearance in the State in a large commercial orchard in the Kanawha Valley near Charleston in 1929. It spread to such an extent that it practically destroyed some 16,000 trees and the orchard was abandoned. Later the disease appeared in other orchards of the State.

An intensive study of the disease was begun by the State University Experiment Station under the direction of Mr. Berg, and it was continued with various experiments until he recently isolated the cause. The name given the disease was suggested by the shiny black papules which are characteristic of its early stages. Berg's experiments have resulted in the finding that the fungus can be controlled to a considerable extent by thorough spraying either with Bordeaux mixture or lime sulphur.

Heretofore the papular types of apple bark disease have baffled plant pathologists throughout the country, being among the few apple tree diseases not yet fully understood.

Hill Confident Goldsborough Chances Good

Former Member of House Goes to Eastern Shore to Push Campaign.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—On the heels of Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough, Republican candidate for the governorship nomination, who visited here a few days ago, former Representative John Philip Hill spent some time in Annapolis today in behalf of his candidacy for the Republican nomination as United States Senator.

After conferring with party leaders, and meeting other friends, including some of his boyhood days, as he was born in Annapolis 54 years ago, Mr. Hill took a ferry for the Eastern Shore to continue his campaign in that section. He will return to Baltimore Saturday to greet members of the Twenty-ninth Division with whom he served during the World War. Meanwhile Goldsborough is winding up a campaign in the southern counties.

Like Senator Goldsborough, Mr. Hill has just completed a tour of western Maryland counties. He said sentiment indicated a big sweep for Goldsborough in that sector. The gubernatorial candidate himself expressed confidence of the situation there, when he was in Annapolis. Hill is a devout supporter of Goldsborough.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—The outcome of the September 12 primary in Washington County will not be known for at least 24 hours after the polls close, election officials said today.

The Democratic ballot will contain 83 names and the Republican 53.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—A statement made by a member of the Carroll County Board of Election Supervisors yesterday, indicated that the withdrawal of three primary candidates, whose applications were at first contested on the grounds that they had not been properly acknowledged, would be recognized.

Whether the withdrawal of Mrs. Nannie F. Ely, Sykesville; Mrs. Myrtle Pilson, New Windsor, candidates for the Republican State central committee; and Nevlin Heitshew, Uniontown, candidate for the Democratic State central committee, would be recognized was questioned by counsel for the board of election supervisors.

A primary contest for the Republican State central committee would have resulted if the withdrawal of the two candidates had not been recognized, according to Republican party leaders who had planned to issue a writ of injunction against the board of election supervisors, to restrain them from placing the names on the ballot.

Grantsville, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—The name of Hugh Carey McMahon, World War veteran, farmer, lumberman and forester, near this place, who had announced his intention of becoming an independent candidate for State Senator from Garrett County, will not appear on the ballot for the general election, according to J. Frank Browning, president of the board of election supervisors.

It was necessary for McMahon to file a petition, signed by 500 voters, by midnight Monday, in order to become a candidate and did not appear.

The Democratic committee filed its party ballot as follows:

William R. Browning, for State Senator; Claude Stanton, Grantsville, clerk of court; C. E. Fillthorp, Bittinger, judge of the Orphans' Court; B. F. Schroyer, Friendsville; George Poole, Kitzmiller, and Harper Bartlett, Oakland, membership in the House of Delegates; Clarence Spear, sheriff; James P. Treacy, county treasurer; Mrs. Evelyn Teets, clerk to the county commissioners; William R. Offutt, State's attorney.

Three Democratic candidates for the board of county commissioners, M. W. Pendergast, Hutton; William Miller, Accident, and Harry Porter, Oakland, already had filed.

At a meeting of the Republican committee two vacant places on the ballot were filed. C. Milton Cincell was named for surveyor and Frederick A. Thayer for State's attorney.

Waynesboro W. C. T. U. Elects.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—At the August meeting of the Waynesboro Women's Christian Temperance Union, Mrs. F. S. Bourner was reelected president. All other officers were reelected except Mrs. D. A. Blubaugh, who resigned as vice president. Mrs. C. M. Ankerbrand succeeds her.

Rheumatism Stone Grows From Size Of Dime to Quarter

Pocomoke City, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—A stone, which has grown from the size of a dime to the size of a quarter, is owned by L. Thomas Davis of this city.

Forty years ago a friend gave him a stone which the friend said would cure his rheumatism if carried in his pocket. Four years later he noticed that it had increased in size, so he placed it in a pill-box. Ten years later the pill-box lid was lifted by the increased size of the stone. The stone now is about the size of a quarter and weighs seven ounces.

Newcomb, Hall Laud Changes In Curriculum

State Superintendent and University Head Talk to Educators.

By Howard Turner.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 30.—Speaking here today before the Virginia Curriculum Revision Conference, President John Lloyd Newcomb, of the University of Virginia, pledged the support of the university to State educational officials in carrying out the proposed new methods of instruction in this public school system.

Dr. Newcomb said he had been following the revision movement with great interest, and praised the work of the State department of education and teachers, who for the past three years have been experimenting with a program designed to more adequately train students to meet changing needs and social conditions.

Dr. Hall Speaks.

On the basis of experience gained from the three-year trial period and supplemented by advice offered by curriculum specialists in this conference, the State department of education this year plans a gradual process of augmenting and supplanting traditional subjects with materials more closely associated with every-day activities. The change will tentatively apply to elementary grades and the early stages of high school.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, who is considered the leader in the new educational movement, today told several hundred superintendents, principals and teachers here that "the State department of education does not have the authority nor the desire to force this program on you, but we do want you to take part of it and try it out. There is a whole lot of subject matter you will not find between the lids of books," he added.

Urges Study Anyway.

For those schools that are not ready for the change, Dr. Hall suggested that the new material be discussed in faculty meetings. He pointed out that teachers would find themselves using it in their classroom work.

"Counties can not go ahead in a wholesale manner unless they have a high school principal and elementary supervisor who thoroughly understand the curriculum changes," he declared.

Discussing methods of installation of the new courses of study, Dr. Hall suggested either complete installation of the prepared program, installation in selected schools, or installation in classrooms taught by certain selected teachers.

Others who participated in today's discussions were Dr. H. L. Caswell of George Peabody College; Ruth Henderson, elementary supervisor, State department of education; Dean K. J. Hoke, of William and Mary College, and Dr. D. W. Peters, State director of instruction.

Virginia Policy On Mill Strike Held Doubtful

Both Danville Factions Silent on Attitude Toward Walkout.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—There was no definite information available today on how the cotton textile strike would effect Virginia. Danville is the center of the industry in this State.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the National strike committee of the United Textile Workers, was the director of the strike in the Danville mills in 1931.

The number of union workers in the mills at present is undetermined, and whether they will walk out in response to the strike call was not known here. Mayor Wooding of Danville has been authorized by the police commission to employ extra policemen if needed.

Danville, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Officials of the United Textile Workers tonight refused to be quoted on the probable course the local will take in meeting the strike call.

Mrs. Roxie Dodson, head of the U. T. W. local, said: "I am not in a position to say now," and indicated that she would confer with district leaders and that there would be a meeting with the Central Labor Council before Saturday.

The test here will come Monday, for the mills do not observe Labor Day.

Officials of Dan River Mills, employing 6,000 men and women who went through a strike in 1930, would not be quoted on the strike call.

Hopewell Strike Adds To Virginia Aid Crisis

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—Virginia's relief work program has been considerably complicated by the Tubize-Chatillon strike in Hopewell, Gov. George C. Peery said today, adding, "We hope the same situation will not arise in other parts of the State. Virginia does not intend," the Governor said, "to allow anyone to be hungry or in need."

At the same time he made it clear the State does not wish to be put in the position of financing strikes, through the administration of relief money.

State aid has been promised the Hopewell strikers who appealed for help through George Moorehouse, United Textile Workers of America organizer and leader of the strike there. At a conference in the Governor's office a few days ago Moorehouse told the executive that need was being felt by former workers.

The Hopewell strike situation has recently been further complicated by announcement that the plant is to be dismantled. Former employes have been told that remaining in Hopewell in hope of a reopening would be vain.

Fairfax Mayor Finally Agrees To Take Office

Falls Church Council to Hold Last Meeting Before Revision.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The mayors and councils of two of the incorporated towns in Fairfax County will take office tomorrow.

Ending the indecision that has existed in the town of Fairfax since the town election in June as to who would become mayor, William Lindsey Carne, son of the publisher of the Fairfax Herald, who received the greatest number of votes in the election, announced yesterday that he had decided to take the position.

When the election was held in June, no citizen of the town announced his candidacy for any of the local offices. On election day the voters were handed a blank ballot, on which it was necessary to write in the names of their choices for mayor and town council. This plan resulted in six citizens receiving votes for mayor and 31 receiving one or more votes for town council.

Carne, an attorney, received the greatest number of votes for mayor and at the time it was believed he was not qualified because he was not a freehold property owner, as required in the old town charter, until it was found that the State constitution had abolished this requirement.

The town council of Falls Church will meet tonight in the town hall to conclude its business before the new council is organized next month. Mayor L. P. Daniel was reelected in June.

Horse Show Entries Grow.

Eighty-eight entries have been received to date for the annual horse show of the Colvin Run Citizens Association, which will be held Saturday at Huntmere on the Leesburg pike. Between 125 and 150 entries are expected by Saturday.

Among the Washingtonians who have entered their horses are Miss Margaret Cotter, Miss Nancy P. Hanna, W. Carlton Eacho, Henry Cornwell, Lee Counselman. Others, from Maryland, include W. G. Hill, of Bethesda; Charles E. Skipper, of Annapolis; Maj. S. P. Spaulding, of Aberdeen Proving Grounds.

Mrs. Richard I. Pierce, of Vienna, has accepted the chairmanship of the committee of the Fairfax County Chapter, D. A. R., which will prepare the chapter's float for the Manassas Dairy Festival parade. The float will depict a Colonial living room. Mrs. Pierce will be assisted by Mrs. Franklin Williams, Dr. Jessie Scott and Mrs. Stephen Stuntz.

Mrs. Harry A. Fellows was yesterday reelected president of the Robert E. Lee Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, of Falls Church, Va. Mrs. W. L. Turner was elected first vice president; Mrs. J. S. Thorne, second vice president; Mrs. William S. Herring, secretary; Mrs. A. H. Barbor, treasurer; Mrs. J. S. Thorne, registrar; Mrs. Albert Lester, historian, and Mrs. Flora B. Hiett, chaplain.

Mrs. Fellows and Mrs. Thorne were elected first and second delegates to the State convention in Petersburg, October 2 to 5 inclusive, with Mrs. John Edwards and Mrs. A. H. Barbor as first and second alternates.

Plans were made to observe the fortieth anniversary of the National U. D. C. with a Founders' Day party, September 10, at the home of Mrs. Fellows.

Mrs. Mills Honored.

The Vienna Parent-Teacher Association last night appointed Mrs. Grace Mills to see Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson to ask the county school board to assist the association in equipping and repairing the school auditorium. Greatest need was felt to be the installation of heat, there being at present no method of heating the auditorium in the winter. At least 65 additional chairs are needed. Assistance in improving the acoustics of the auditorium also was requested. The profits from the lawn party and community social to be given by the P. T. A. Saturday night will be used to pay part of these expenses. Assisting Mrs. Nancy Faulkner, chairman of Saturday night's program, are Mrs. Thomas R. Moreland, Mrs. W. W. Louk, Mrs. Virgie Martin, Mrs. Beatrice Winslow, Mrs. Jewell Denham, Mrs. George Manvell, Mrs. Lawrence Leigh and Mrs. Grace Mills.

Mrs. W. W. Louk and Mrs. William Manvell were appointed to set the date for the reception to the teachers. The Manvell orchestra will furnish music. The invitation of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. to put on an educational moving picture for the school children was accepted.

W. W. Louk presented to the Association 36 serving trays and a quantity of silverware and dishes.

Marshall, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—A petition will be placed before J. R. H. Action on the petition will be taken tomorrow in the courthouse in Warrenton, where Paul C. Richards, jr., of Warrenton, attorney for the petitioners, will present it. About 100 voters of Marshall have signed the petition.

The limits of the proposed corporate town were made by the Blackwell Engineering & Construction Co. last January.

Beer License Refusal Aired

Seat Pleasant Mayor to Be Asked to Furnish More Reasons.

Objections to the issuance of a beer license to Mrs. Theresa Kayte, restaurant proprietress, of Seat Pleasant, Md., were aired before the Prince Georges County Board of Liquor Commissioners yesterday. Action was postponed.

Walter C. Green, attorney for Mrs. Kayte, said Mayor Harmon Acuff of Seat Pleasant, who filed the objections, would be asked by the commissioners to show further cause why the license should not be granted.

By letter Mayor Acuff has alleged that all persons engaged in business in the town, whose reputations were known to the mayor and council, have been granted licenses and he does not feel that more should be granted, Green said.

Mayor Acuff also is said to have pointed out that parking conditions around the firehouse, near which the Kayte establishment is located, were also a cause for objection.

When The Doctors Disagree.

Resignations are flying about NRA headquarters as thick and fast as were dead cats a few months ago. It is no longer possible to conceal the schism in the ranks of this vital recovery organization. Nor does the continued pretense in official circles that all is running smoothly carry the reassurance it is intended to give.

Changes are to be expected in any new organization as large as the NRA, especially when it has been established under the pressure of an emergency. In ordinary circumstances the resignations of Blackwell Smith and Leon Henderson would attract very little notice. It is the nature of the struggle which is apparently going on under the surface at NRA headquarters that gives rise to misgivings.

If the meager information available is correct, this reorganization muddle has its roots in a dispute as to fundamental policies. The objective fixed by Gen. Johnson for the NRA is apparently repugnant to some of his chief lieutenants and to some of the President's chief advisers. Resignations are being handed in because no one knows what the policy of the NRA will be next week. No doubt they are being rejected because the general himself doesn't know in which direction the organization may turn.

To this confusion is added the alleged fantastic advice of Gen. Johnson's secretary. It is difficult to imagine a secretary counseling the Recovery Administrator to make a "dramatic exit" from his post on the theory that industry would rally to his standard. Yet this farcical touch is not entirely out of keeping with the confused objectives, the personal animosities, the suspicion and accusations which have involved the NRA in turmoil.

The Lone Star.

The feminists have scored again. And again has a masculine slander against their sex been refuted.

Only last week, a wife furnished telling evidence that there is little in the lame legend about women monopolizing conversation. She sued her husband for divorce on the ground that he let her do all the talking and wouldn't speak a word himself. Longer ago, yet not so long as to be forgotten by our hurried world, two feminine fliers remained aloft in the same plane without any of those bickerings in which women, when thrown together, are traditionally supposed to indulge. Now a pair of mere girls has contentedly achieved a similar success in the windy wastes above Chicago.

That ready-tongued misogynist, the Post-Impressionist's Major, will probably remark that there is no essential element of marvel in this adventure of Miss Owens and Miss La Rene. He will probably say that women are, by their very nature, always in the air, and that it was a good thing these particular females had to descend for a while. But he can not thus easily becloud the atmospheric fact that the two Texans, seeking to better the women's refueling endurance flight record, pursued their quest in concord.

They have lived up—away up—to the name they confidently gave their air-boat. It is "The Lone Star." And they didn't quarrel over which of them better deserved her State's title.

A Delicate Balance.

A dispatch from the merry town of Split, in Yugoslavia, informs us that mice have overrun the Island of Solta, and that peasants, in dire distress, have appealed to authorities for a shipment of cats. Thus is attention called once more to the war between the species and what may happen when the balance decreed by nature is upset.

It is no extravagant statement to say that we in America could not continue our existence without the birds. It would not be a plague of mice that would make life unendurable, but a plague of insects as bad, if not worse. If anyone thinks this statement exaggerated he has only to make inquiry of the Bureau of Entomology, Department of Agriculture. This agency on several occasions, especially when the felling of trees was at its peak, has issued warnings of what might happen should the homes of birds be destroyed and the feathered songsters pass out of the picture.

It is said that when a bird's nest holding only two eggs is destroyed it means life for a million insects which would have been eaten by the progeny during one year. Everyone who gives thought to this would do well to make some provision for the wrens, sparrows, jays, "mockers," flickers and others which ask only that he be unmolested in trees and that when the ground is covered with snow a few crumbs of bread be tossed upon the mantle of white. Do this and you will see that the same birds, or their descendants, return to your garden year after year.

Those who read the Yugoslavia dispatch may have been prone to laugh at the rodent triumph. But it is no laughing matter when the friends of man become outnumbered by his enemies. In the lower animal world and among insects the yearly increase is so great that unless the fruits thereof be checked the earth would be overrun by creatures who refuse to admit the mastery of man.

The Textile Strike.

What bids fair to be the most widespread strike in American industrial history has been called for tomorrow night. Much of the blame for this serious situation, which will affect thousands of people from northern New England through the depths of the South, must be laid at the door of the industry itself.

Last-minute efforts to avert the strike went for nothing after the Cotton Textile Institute bluntly refused to attend a peace conference sponsored by the National Labor Relations Board, whose invitation had been accepted by the union officials. As soon as George A. Sloan sent his telegram of refusal the union had no option but to issue the strike call. From one viewpoint Mr. Sloan has effectively called the labor bluff, for the United Textile Workers are strategically in a poor position to wage successful industrial warfare. But it would have been more admirable and socially constructive if the Textile Institute had been magnanimous enough to accept mediation, instead of defiantly throwing down the gage of battle.

If carried out with good will on both sides, the meeting sought by the Labor Relations Board might have gone far toward ironing out the differences between the textile operators and the unionized workers. Over a period of several months half-hearted attempts to avert serious industrial trouble in the first industry to accept an NRA code have been breaking down. It is not so much a matter of "amending a law under a threat of force," as Mr. Sloan says in his capacity as chairman of the Cotton Textile Code Authority, as it is of exploring a tangled situation to determine to what extent the demands of labor are reasonable and susceptible of adjustment without the use of force. The codes were in part designed to make the adjustment of labor relationships easier, not more difficult.

The walkout on Saturday promises to be the first serious Nation-wide strike in history. Industries have been tied up before, but they were industries like that of anthracite coal, which are thoroughly localized. The famous Pullman strike of 1894 was serious in Chicago only, and the two textile strikes, in Lawrence and Paterson, did not spread beyond those cities. The threatened National railroad strike of 1916 was averted by enactment of the 8-hour law. This strike, however, will be felt everywhere, it is predicted—in cities, small towns and "company" towns. It will even affect the deep South, where unionism, under the NRA, has made great strides.

And the sad part of it is that an industry which goes back to the very beginning of industrialism in this country can not show more enlightened leadership at a time when spirit and necessities of the recovery program both demand peaceful adjustments rather than the rule of force. It is indisputable that labor tactics in bringing the present conflict have been arrogant and provocative. But the Textile Institute has clearly shown that arrogance and provocation are not limited to one side of the dispute.

Ritchie Returns.

Maryland's affection for Gov. Ritchie was fittingly demonstrated yesterday when he returned from a vacation in Europe—said to be the first extended rest he has taken since he became chief executive at Annapolis nearly 15 years ago. Even before the Governor reached the soil of his home State he was accorded a hearty welcome. From the time he disembarked at Norfolk until he reached Baltimore Mr. Ritchie enjoyed an almost continuous round of greetings and congratulations, for he has just passed the fifty-eighth milestone in his career.

To a certain extent the reception at Baltimore was inspired by politics. Since Gov. Ritchie is a candidate for reelection his supporters naturally took advantage of his return to arouse public enthusiasm. Yet there is little partisanship in the genuine esteem of the average citizen for this devoted public servant. Quite apart from the issues involved in the approaching campaign, the "Old Line" State is proud of Gov. Ritchie's record for intelligent administration.

Perhaps this is the greatest compliment that Maryland could pay to the white-haired gentleman who has all but made the State House at Annapolis a permanent residence. Dozens of capable men who have spent a large part of their lives in the public service have been retired in disrepute during the last two years merely because of economic conditions over which they had no control. Gov. Ritchie seems to have evaded even the depression stigma, and the chief issue that has been raised against him is the length of his gubernatorial service. In any ultimate estimate of the man and the executive, of course, this factor must redound to his credit.

A Rare Visitor.

Had he been a Plenipotentiary Extraordinary or even the Governor of a Western State, his hotel room would have been crowded with visitors. The press would have been there in full swing. But he was only a writer of plays and so he almost slipped through the politically minded National Capital unnoticed. And yet R. C. Sherriff, who used to adjust insurance until the authorship of "Journey's End" made him famous, is one of the really top notch individuals of our day. His record, as told in yesterday's Post, is one of extraordinary achievement, despite his own attempts at modesty in speaking about it.

Why is it that a playwright is so often ignored? We can imagine the scene at the Mayflower had it been Diana Wynyard who was present there instead of the individual who took what really is a very dull book and from it made for her one of the best movies of the decade. Perhaps it is because there is nothing glamorous about an individual who works with his pencil and paper, even if his desk is in glamorous Hollywood. Whatever the reason, the fact remains that there can't be plays without playwrights. And so we are glad that The Post reporter spotted this purely literary individual in the welter of politicians, industrialists and labor leaders who throng the city. It is pleasant to know that some one comes here who isn't seeking patronage, a tax refund, or a code revision!

We wish, however, the reporter had found out why Mr. Sherriff honored us with a visit. Is he to write a play about the New Deal? Whatever the reason, he left behind a nice thought. When he gets back to England he says he is going to go rowing on the Thames, "pretending to be thinking deeply." The Potomac is not the Thames, but a rowboat will float upon it. It might not be a bad idea if some one of those who passed the literary Mr. Sherriff by without recognition, emulated his pastime. For if one pretends long enough, who can tell but what the pretension may become a fact? Thanks for the suggestion, Mr. Sherriff.

Unemployment Insurance.

Stating his belief that "there is no legislative subject more important," Gov. Lehman promises the New York State Federation of Labor the speedy adoption by that State of a comprehensive unemployment insurance law. "It is a source of real regret to me," he says, "that no legislation for the establishment of a system of unemployment insurance was enacted by the Legislature last year or this year."

The Governor of New York is not the only State executive who now has very much on his mind the necessity of building defenses against the menace of unemployment which shall be less wasteful, and more scientific, than the dole systems at present in force. And Mr. Lehman is not the only Governor to realize that our form of government demands State action in the field of unemployment insurance regardless of Federal policy in this respect. But the industrial importance of New York, as well as its enlightened record in the field of social legislation, give particular importance to the local developments which Mr. Lehman promises.

Just one American State has at present in effect a system of unemployment insurance. That is Wisconsin, where an "Unemployment Reserves and Compensation Act," passed in January, 1932, went into effect on July 1. It is an ingenious and interesting system, differing greatly from accepted European methods of unemployment insurance, but not for that reason less worthy of the closest study by other States, and by the Federal Government.

The Wisconsin Act, as its name implies, is designed to build up unemployment "reserves" by individual employers, rather than to initiate pooled insurance. Only employers contribute and as the unemployment fund of the particular company is built up the amount of contribution diminishes or ceases altogether. Each employer's account can be used only to pay benefits to his own employes, and his liability is at all times limited to the amount in his reserve.

Many students of unemployment insurance make two major criticisms of the Wisconsin scheme. It is argued that a system in which only the employer contributes is not merely paternalistic but attributes to management a sole responsibility for unemployment which is in fact not entirely his. And it is also argued that the company fund method fails to take into account that the incidence of unemployment varies between different companies and different industries, and that sound insurance principles demand a pooling of good risks and bad risks.

These variations of expert opinion indicate that much will be learned by having the various States work out their own systems of unemployment insurance, particularly because industrial conditions are so dissimilar in the different Commonwealths. A single stereotyped unemployment insurance system would probably be undesirable in this country. The Federal Government can do most by establishing standards and by pushing backward States into taking not any prescribed action, but some action, in the direction of scientific unemployment relief.

Artistic Restraint.

"The assignment to Addis Ababa, Ethiopia, of Charles E. Allen, of Maysville, Ky., now American Consul at Istanbul, has been canceled."

Thus does the State Department's latest bulletin of "Foreign Service Changes" suggest an Iliad in a sentence. Thus can an Odyssey be compressed into four lines.

Where is the connection between Maysville, Ky., and the capital of the Lion of Judah? With what emotions did this non-Haggard Mr. Allen look forward to his adventure near the scene of Allan Quartermain's greatest exploits? "Ethiopia" evokes memories of Sheba's Queen, of the ancient Negro Christian Church of Abyssinia. And, as for Addis Ababa, most of us do not quite believe that, outside of Prester John legends, it has any existence. Why was the assignment "canceled?" Did the State Department find out that there indeed is no such place?

To none of these questions is any answer supplied by the bulletin of "Foreign Service Changes"—

"We ask and ask. Thou smilest and
Out-topping knowledge."

The State Department author cultivates all the reticence of a Slavonic short story, where no time is wasted over plot, where there is little beginning and no end, but where every emphasis is laid upon suggestion. The truly literary spirit can not be crushed even within the compass of a government communique.

In a way, it's encouraging to see capital and labor scrapping again. This indicates that there is now something worth fighting over.

Mr. Hoover is writing a book on liberty. There are some who wonder where he is finding enough of it to fill a book.

Nature usually evens things up. A grasshopper is lazier than a bee, but he has better manners.

The most deplorable thing about the average murder mystery story is that no one ever murders the author.

Where Unionism Helps.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial of August 23, headed "Behind the Donovan Case," you appear to deplore the circumstance that "the decision of the Labor Relations Board tends to establish the theory of trade-unionism as a means of adjusting personnel relations in the Government service."

Doubtless, an ideal plan of adjustment of personnel relations in the Government service might be conceived of, just as the adoption of the Golden Rule or the principle of the brotherhood of man in the world of business and industry might be conceived of, but no such plan appears in sight in either case. In the meantime, Federal workers find that the conditions under which they labor and the problems they have to meet are much the same as in private industry, and accordingly, being practical people, they are year by year coming to rely more and more upon organized effort (call it trade-unionism if you prefer) in matters affecting their personnel relations, whether it be tenure, working hours or conditions, salary, or what not.

Following the passage of the civil service act, some fifty years ago, it would be difficult to name any substantial betterment, general in its application, that Federal workers have obtained except under the banner of trade-unionism. One needs only cite the retirement acts, the classification act, the Welch and Brookhart salary increase acts, the Saturday half-holiday act, as examples—all obtained as the result of persistent organized effort, mainly under trade-union auspices. Something is due to the efforts of the Federal Bar Association, and, indirectly, to the Department of Labor and the Civil Service Commission.

Today, the hope of salary restoration, reasonable annual leave, boards to adjust differences and grievances, abolition of the restriction on marriage, the shorter work day, &c., lies in trade-union affiliation. In short, one may, in all fairness, ask the question: Who else is doing anything effective along these lines? From time to time a hand is lifted or a few voices raised, but what do these avail? It is a far different matter when the hands and voices are millions in number, and that is just what trade-union affiliation brings to the support of the Federal worker, no matter what his class of work.

Sam Patch's Jump.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of August 26 published a picture of a part of Rochester, N. Y., as it was in 1834—the New York Central Railroad bridge and the first of three of the falls in the Genesee River that separates the city into East and West Rochester; also a structure built at the falls at that time, and the story of Sam Patch's jump into the falls from the structure.

I am a native of Rochester. My maternal grandfather was a member of the Rochester "Town Counsel" before Rochester's charter as a city, the centennial of which charter is now being celebrated. Your brief write-up about Sam Patch omits a statement that traditionally is know to at least "we elders" of the Flower City. Sam Patch was from New York City or nearby New Jersey. He was known as a "daredevil" jumper from heights into bodies of water. Sam had a tame, trained bear that always took jumps with him. The tradition is that, the day Sam jumped into the falls of the Genesee River, he had been drinking "hard liquor" and he could not induce the bear, as was usual, to make the jump. So Sam for once jumped alone and was drowned. W. E. RYAN.

Marriage and Recovery.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: An analysis of manufactured products shows that the majority of "items" are for "home" consumption; that 65 per cent of the lumber milled was for "home" building; that the majority of commerce is centered around the home. Therefore, it is evident that the greater the number of homes the greater the number of potential customers.

Inasmuch as a man and his wife constitute a home, it follows that through the medium of marriage the number of potential customers will be increased.

A Governmental program to establish the home by giving the furnishings and rent of the home to employed females who will become married and leave their positions, in the amount of $250 in furnishings and $100 in rent, would result in:

(a) "Orders on the books" for household furnishings.

(b) Occupancy for the surplus of vacant apartments and cottages.

(c) Free the "frozen" assets or mortgages.

(d) Allow the "frozen" banks to open.

(e) Create positions.

Finally, as the "home" is the "backbone" of the Nation, it is only by the restoration of home life that recovery can be obtained.

E. LOUIS BEARD.
Washington, Aug. 22.

Somewhat Sweeping.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial entitled "In Louisiana," published in The Post of August 18, you said, in speaking of Senator Long and his political control of Louisiana: "Fortunately for Louisiana, Senator Long's legislative program has not become law, and if enough opposition to it can not be aroused in the Senate, there still remain the courts. These in all probability will be forced to find a great part of this new legislation at variance with Constitutional provisions. After all, a Legislature can not vote away the rights guaranteed by that document."

Such sentiments from The Post editor are astonishing, when I recall the complacency with which he viewed the unconstitutional demands the President of the United States made upon Congress, under the guise of an existing emergency, and the threats of loss of patronage and later defeat if any one dared to oppose these demands. Every act passed by Congress (or I should say forced through Congress by the President) since the 4th of March, 1933, is in violation of the Constitution of the United States. Every agency for the distribution of the taxpayers money, as set up by the President, is unconstitutional. I recall no editorial condemning these acts. I did see, however, that many believe the President will try to make enough new appointments to the Supreme Court of the United States to enable him to control that court's decisions. So it would seem that Senator Long, if his acts do violate the constitution of his State, is merely following in the footsteps of the President of the United States. Should one be condemned and the other praised?

About 20 years ago, I heard Senator Borah make an address before a graduating class of a Washington law-school. As the climax to a magnificent speech, he said: "Men and women, never forget that the Constitution of the United States is the greatest human document ever conceived by the mind of man; protect and defend it always. When, in your daily contacts, you meet misrepresentation, fraud, dishonesty, do not be discouraged; the rottenness is at the top; the roots and the body of our National life are sound; the top will eventually be destroyed by the new, healthy growth from beneath. Obey the Constitution, and keep your standards high." Senator Borah spoke with the tongue of a prophet.

MARIE GRAVES BONHAM.
Gordonsville, Va., Aug. 22.

Roar, Sore—and More.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To a newcomer to Washington, perhaps critical comparisons arise more spontaneously than would be the case with a long-time resident. However this may be, here are a few:

Why so much noise? There seems to be no ban on the usual offenders in this field; motors rage and roar, trolley trucks and tracks squeak, and auto horns blow at drivers' impulse. Anyone living in the lanes of travel or frequenting the downtown streets can attest to this, provided he has normal sensibilities. When a city like New York can wage a war on unnecessary noise, why not Washington?

Much has been written about the city "eyesores." And much will be done, no doubt. But there is something more—upon entering the city one day in early summer, I was impressed with the littered condition of the downtown streets. The American Capital should be neat; visitors from certain foreign cities could draw a most unfavorable comparison.

Finally, the incongruity of tolerating a "walkathon" in a city of the Capital's reputation is remarkable—remarkable that a performance of this character should carry on so near the courts of wisdom.

As Others See It.

Great Britain—Europe.

The National Government of Great Britain is following the feeble policy of vacillating between isolationist and internationalist views. On the one hand, it has declared that Great Britain adheres to her obligations under the Locarno treaties and that the League of Nations is the basis of her policy. On the other hand, it has declared that the British are their own judges of commitments under the Locarno treaties, and Sir John Simon has emphatically stated that Great Britain shall undertake no new obligations on behalf of the League of Nations. This halting policy has led to the loss of British leadership in Europe.

Great Britain must soon make a vital choice on which the fate both of the government and of the nation may depend—the choice between isolationism and internationalism. The isolationist policy is powerful in the Conservative party and is preached day by day by the Daily Mail and the Daily Express with their mammoth circulations. Europe, they argue, is rapidly approaching another war and when it comes the wisest policy for Great Britain will be to keep out. She ought, they insist, to withdraw from the Locarno commitments, wind up the Geneva League of Nations and concentrate upon the real League of Nations—the British Empire.

To this day the internationalists reply that on the day that Bleriot flew the English Channel England became a continental nation. If the League of Nations dies, Europe will divide itself into two rival systems of alliances. Great Britain will have to join one or the other and fight on its side when the inevitable clash comes. Her policy should be to stand by the one institution which can save Europe from the war—the League of Nations. This view is supported by the Labor and Liberal parties and by a great body of religious opinion in Great Britain.

The Post Impressionist

Pan-Polar Epos.

Postoffice, Friday.

CONSULT the biographical section of Webster's International Dictionary:

"PEARY, Robert Edwin; American Arctic explorer. Reached the North Pole, April 6, 1909."

Turn to the word "Myth:"

". . . A person or thing existing wholly in imagination, or whose actual existence is not verifiable."

Now take up the current issue of The American Mercury, and behold:

"The more we postpone examination of this unseemly myth, the more damage will its increasing virulence do."

The author of that sentiment is Henshaw Ward. Its subject is Peary's attainment of the North Pole. Its thesis is that the attainment didn't happen.

Mr. Ward lays mighty stress upon the reported rapidity of Peary's final polar dash. The speed of that dash of the commander, the Negro Henson and their four Eskimos "increased," after leaving behind the rest of the party, "marvelously."

Author Ward says: "No observations for longitude were taken . . . Yet he (Peary) affirms that the sledges speeded due north along the 17th meridian, making daily runs of astonishing length: April 2, 25 miles; April 3, 20 miles; April 4, 25 miles; April 6, 63 miles; April 7—reaching the Pole, circling about it, and beginning the homeward trip—63 miles. Indeed, this last day's trip was really much higher, for Peary seems to say that during the 24 hours of April 7 he covered 102 miles. He seems to say that he was walking most of the time. . . . Even if his claim of going 100 miles in one day is an inadvertence, his average speed . . . far surpasses any known achievement of Arctic travel: 28 nautical miles per day! . . .

Mr. Ward asks us to compare this "with the best that Nansen could achieve on any single day during 15 months of sledging in the same region: he could not exceed 20 miles per day, except once, when he 'thought' he covered 25 . . . (Take) Shackleton's best going . . . on land, during a period of five consecutive days . . . from near the South Pole . . . going down hill: there was a high wind at his back; he kept a sail spread most of the time; yet on his best day he made only 25 miles . . . his average for five days . . . was only 20 miles." And Mr. Ward notes that Peary makes "no reference to any loss of distance because of detours or drift . . . An actual man would be lucky if his march was less than 1,000 miles."

Our gentle critic acknowledges debts to Capt. Thomas F. Hall and the Rev. J. Gordon Hayes. The former personage finds fault with Peary's polar photographs:

"All the shadows cast on that day at that place were . . . 7-degree shadows. Artists . . . will find that not a single picture shows a 7-degree shadow. All the photographs indicate shadows ranging around 30 degrees."

Nor, says Cape Cod Navigator Hall, can Peary "get his separate computations to check within 100 degrees of longitude."

"If," says Mr. Ward, "you ask the next friend you talk with why he believes that Peary reached the North Pole, he will probably reply: . . . 'Because Peary's records were examined and checked by the best experts in Washington.' . . . The fact is that there was no real examination . . . by any expert in his official and responsible capacity . . .

"Another belief of Americans about Peary is that he had made before 1909 a long record of competence and trustworthiness in polar exploration. There is no such record. Any man who reads Mr. Hayes' exposure of Peary's mistakes (in 'Robert Edwin Peary,' published 1929) will be prepared to believe that Peary was worse than mistaken about his dash to the Pole. Nansen showed that Peary could not have known at what longitude he turned back in his first expedition onto the Greenland ice; his chronometer had stopped; the theodolite observations were 'notoriously uncertain,' and the accuracy of his watch had not been determined. . . .

"In 'The North Pole' Peary mentions pressure-ridges as '25 to 50 feet high' and describes one of them as, 'without exaggeration, the size of the dome of the Capitol;' Nansen says he never saw a ridge higher than 23 feet. In 1906, when Peary was desperately trying to reach the Pole and was in a hopeless situation, his difficulties 'vanished as if cut off with a knife,' says Hayes"—who, by the way, belongs to the Manchester (England) Geographical Society—"and his (Peary's) speed marvelously increased as soon as he was alone with Henson and some Eskimos."

And so we go 'round the mulberry-bush (or the Pole) to the question of speed again.

Mr. Ward says that when Peary started north aboard the "Roosevelt" in the July of 1908 "no one doubted his honesty." Does Mr. Ward imply that this quality suffered under pressure from those claims of Dr. Cook which are reported to have reached Peary when he was well on his way back? Or does Mr. Ward intend us to gather that only Peary's accuracy was at fault? How does Mr. Ward define his "Myth?" As "a thing existing wholly in the imagination?" Or merely as a thing of which "the actual existence is unverifiable?"

For our part, we regard Mr. Ward's argument, and Capt. Hall's and Mr. Hayes', too, as Chesterton regards Darwinism. In short, we don't accept it.

But Mr. Ward insists: "Mr. Hayes gives a list of eight men, qualified to judge the case, who have recorded their belief that Peary did not reach the Pole"—among them the Prince of Monaco and Washington's own Gen. A. W. Greely. "I do not think that anyone, who was competent to examine the problem, has ever arrived at any other conclusion."

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

A Study in Dialectics.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG—Dear Aleck: My friend, the dialectician, and myself sat drinking our Pilsener at a sidewalk cafe overlooking a square with undoubtedly a lot of history behind it. I don't know what its name used to be but now along with everything else it is Herr Hitler.

BARGERON

When they say the Free City of Danzig, Aleck, I think they mean free of everything but German influence. At any rate, we sat there, a couple of blase, widely traveled men. At an adjoining table sat the likeness of the Kaiser himself, tall and erect, shoulders thrown back and with a handlebar mustache that excelled Senator Ellison Smith's; you know, Cotton Ed Smith, of South Carolina. Never have I seen a beer drinker, obviously of the old school, tarry so long with one glass of beer.

The more I saw of him, the more I wanted an exchange of minds, such an exchange as the old writers write about—an exchange in a tavern between scholarly men over a glass of beer. To read these fellows one would think that in the old country one gets his education in a tavern over a glass of beer, but, of course, I do not think this of the old country. But I do see where there can be an exchange of minds so I confide my desire to my friend, the dialectician, and we eye the German closely for the first friendly expression.

This comes when he has emptied his glass down to one-half inch from the bottom of the glass. I suppose the baronial affluence that had gone with the full glass had now waned to the point where the lordly gentleman felt a dependence upon his fellow man. Anyhow he turned to us impetuously with this half inch of beer and lifting it said: "Prosit!"

"Prosit," we said right back at him and then invited him over. That was the way the exchange of minds began.

* * * *

Well, of course, we did not start right out on such deep subjects as politics and the culture of peoples. No widely traveled men do that. What we did was what some writer has so eloquently described as "parry thrusts." Yes, we parried thrusts for a while. Our discourse began upon the subject of the habit the Danish tradespeople have of leaving a loose loop in the string with which they tie your packages. This, we all agreed, was so you could carry the package on the handlebar of your bicycle.

The German's agreement on this showed us that he, too, was a widely traveled and scholarly man. This established, my friend, the dialectician, opened right up.

"It is inconceivable to me," he said, "that a race so proud and cultured as the Germans, would suddenly give up completely and turn their destinies over to a dictator such as Hitler. I am not questioning the fact that he may have helped millions of Germans—whether he has or has not is debatable. I am told that in his organization of the Storm Troops he gave employment, so to speak, to thousands of young men who had despaired. My point is not what he has accomplished for Germany and the German, if anything. Why do a people so advanced as the Germans, after finally getting a democracy, throw up their hands and say they are incapable of either governing or taking care of themselves?

"The idea of your changing the names of your streets and parks to 'Adolph Hitler;' the idea of your saying 'Heil Hitler' every time you turn around, the idea of all these flags!"

"It is strange to you, is it, my friend?" the German replied. "I have also wondered about your country. Why is it your business men and the other people suddenly throw up their hands and say they are incapable of making a living; why do they set up an organization called the NRA and appoint women and men "generals" and "lieutenants generals" and so forth to see that it is enforced, and why do they hang Blue Eagles in their windows, and wreck the establishments of those who do not do the same; why is it, my friend, that they shout 'Heil Hugh Johnson!'"

My friend, the dialectician, gulped, but persisted:

"Well, we didn't kill those who disagreed with us."

"No, you only branded them as traitors, as Neanderthal men, seeking to kill them commercially."

"Yes," my friend pursued, "but we can withdraw all of the emergency powers any time we desire."

"And so can the Germans. The difficulty in your country and mine, however, is that we find difficulty in interesting the people in the form of government when they are being "paid and fed."

I am becoming so broadened by my travels that I don't know what to do.

Two Revolts Reduce Austria to Poverty

Treasury Drained of All Spare Cash With Bills Totaling $40,000,000; Foreign Trade and Tourist Traffic Lost.

This is the second of a series of three articles depicting the hopelessness with which most Austrians view the future. Difficulties of managing a nation with an empty treasury, and a household with a flat purse, are described today.

Vienna, Aug. 30 (AP).—Two revolutions within six months have absorbed all the spare change in Austria. Moreover, they have brought on conditions which have seriously impaired the revenues of the state and the income of individuals, so that recovery seems to many Austrians to be a vain hope.

When the smoke of February's revolution cleared away 1,500 Socialists were dead, and the government had a stack of bills totaling $20,000,000. The revolution in July, touched off with the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, cost almost as much as the first revolt.

To meet these expenditures, large for a tiny country, the government levied a special "security tax" on the people. Many were unable to pay.

The country's financial resources are so low that the government now is seeking a new foreign loan through the League of Nations. At the same time it seeks, through the league, to induce foreign powers to cut interest rates on loans already contracted.

Employes Not Paid.

The government has been unable to pay its employes on the first of the month. A little is being paid them now in three installments each month.

Foreign trade has dwindled to the vanishing point. Tourist traffic, formerly one of the most productive sources of revenue, virtually has ceased. While it is apparently safe for American and other foreign visitors to come to Austria, tourists are apprehensive, so they pass up one of the most beautiful and interesting countries of Europe, and business here languishes.

Railroad trains entering Austria are almost empty. When a press correspondent traveled from Berlin to Vienna he was the only passenger in a big steel coach, which had accommodations for about 50 travelers.

The present disturbed political situation and tariff walls isolate Austria more and more. Austrians are not permitted to travel into Germany except by special authorization. Germans are not allowed to enter Austria unless they pay a tax of 1,000 marks.

Unemployment Grows.

Unemployment in Austria is increasing steadily. The streets of Vienna are filled with the workless, many begging. There are as many women and children as men among the beggars. Thousands can not pay rent, to say nothing of taxes, and retail shops are going into bankruptcy every day. Rents for many stores and apartments have been cut in half in two years, yet vacancies increase.

The people, for the most part, are shabbily dressed for most of them life is a constant struggle. Their attitude is one of utter despair, for they profess to see no future for their country. Consequently many are ready to embrace Nazism.

The jails are so crowded with members of the outlawed Socialist regime in Vienna and with persons involved in the recent Nazi "putsch" that it has been necessary to convert factories, gymnasiums and warehouses into prisons. The maintenance of these thousands of prisoners entails a heavy expense.

Many Workers Jailed.

Concentration camps have relieved the pressure on established jails. In Carinthia so many Nazi workers and sympathizers were arrested that there is a serious shortage of laborers to harvest the crops.

The government of a nation so thoroughly discouraged, divided and hopeless is being attempted by youthful Chancellor Kurt von Schuschnigg. He has started with vigorous policies and a strong determination to maintain the independence of Austria. The world is watching while he tries to stand against the tide of Nazism.

(The last of this series of articles will describe some of the personalities dominating Austrian affairs. It will be published tomorrow.)

Pot Must Shine Before It Calls Kettle Black

By Robert Quillen

I learned one of life's most painful lessons at the age of nine.

My brother was two years older than I, and assumed airs of authority that kept me in a state of boiling resentment and led to frequent conflict.

One day at school the fourth-grade pupils amused themselves during the morning recess by jumping a rope. Two of them stood some distance apart, whirling a rope between them, and the others ran under it one at a time, performed nimbly and briefly, and ran on to make way for the next in line.

When my brother's turn came, he doubtless acquitted himself as well as the others. But my jaundiced eyes saw no grace in him. Envy of his brief prominence and jealously of his superior years drove me frantic. I waved my arms and danced from one foot to the other in a frenzy of derision.

Somewhere I had picked up some bucolic adult's term of criticism, and now I squalled at the top of my voice: "Yah! Yah! Yah! Look at 'im! Look at 'im! Awkward as an old cow with a broken leg"

Behind me stood a group of older pupils, aloof and grand and unapproachable. One of these, a girl of eighteen, looked at me with grave, unsmiling eyes and said in gentle reproof: "You aren't so very graceful yourself."

The world stood still. In one awful lightning flash of understanding I saw myself as others saw me. I knew I had made an ass of myself. I realized, once for all, that the critic invites comparison. I had learned, with dreadful hurt to my vanity, that one must qualify to throw the first stone.

There is a streak of cruelty in all of us that makes us laugh at the misfortunes of others. And this cruelty, multiplied by envy, makes us delight in criticism. We always cheer the loudest when the orator removes the hide of his opponent.

But the critic must have no crack in his armor. Because preachers are critics by profession, the world whoops with delight when one is caught doing wrong.

There are no perfect people. All alike have some fault to justify criticism. But the critic, however gifted or celebrated, is but a small boy on the sidelines, imperfect and envious, squalling: "Yah! Yah! Yah! Look at 'im."

Galax and Marion Get Power Report

Engineers Say Project Would Cost $761,228.

Richmond, Aug. 30 (AP).—Wiley & Wilson, consulting engineers, today submitted an engineering report to the towns of Galax and Marion showing the possibility of a joint hydroelectric power plant at Osborne Shoals, on the New River in Grayson County.

The joint project is estimated to cost $761,228. If financed through a PWA loan and grant, the report said, the two towns would issue bonds aggregating $584,000 and would secure a free grant of $177,228, or 30 per cent of the cost, from the PWA.

This report was suggested as a supplement to the applications of Galax and Marion, now before the PWA in Washington, for loans and grants for municipal power plants. The Galax application asks for $365,582 for a hydroelectric plant, and the Marion application seeks $221,000 for a steam plant.

Tire Iron Believed Weapon in Slaying

Chambersburg, Pa., Aug. 30 (Spl.). A curved tire iron is believed by police to have been the weapon used in inflicting fatal injuries on Charles C. Stevens, 35, Welsh Run, who died Monday after being brought home unconscious by two friends.

The iron was found in the folded top of Stevens' car. He died of the skull injuries.

Ten persons are listed for questioning in connection with Stevens' death. Thus far no clews have been found as to the identity of Stevens' assailant.

Nazi Terrorism Reaches America

England's Great Year.

I mean it quite seriously when I say that one of Great Britain's important contributions to civilization is athletics. Athletic sports go with civilization, and also bring nations together in friendly rivalry. The game of cricket is peculiarly British, and flourishes only in the home country and her commonwealths, like Australia; but other games she has given to the world. Football, tennis, golf (the last-named Scotch) are being cultivated more zealously in all nations; and a very good thing it is.

I have often wondered why America took the indoor game of billiards from France and not from England; but I am glad we did, for it is a better game. English billiards is more closely confined to England even than cricket.

The English were not accustomed to being beaten in golf or tennis by expeditionary forces from other countries; which is why she took the first loss of the amateur championship at golf so hard. Walter J. Travis (Australian by birth) was the first American citizen to win the amateur golf championship of Great Britain, which he did in 1904. The English found that victory indigestible; and, indeed, it did not happen again for many years. Invading crews of oarsmen, Cornell, Harvard, Yale, were invariably beaten in the closing years of the nineteenth and early years of the twentieth century. In tennis, the Irishman Dr. Joshua Pim, was so superior to anything we had in America in the nineties, that when he came here he was a revelation. (Those who saw him play for the Davis Cup in later years saw only Pim's ghost.) And before the World War, no American had ever been Wimbledon champion.

But bad years were in store for the British Isles. In 1924 the Yale crew became Olympian champions of the world; the open golf tournament in Great Britain was won repeatedly by Americans; and to a lesser extent that was also true of the amateur championship, taken by Sweetser, Jones and Little.

In tennis, a New York newspaper, describing this year's Davis Cup victory, said that England had not won the cup on English soil for 21 years; the fact is, she had not won it on English soil for 28 years, the last time being in 1906. And until last year at Paris, she had not won it anywhere since 1912.

Now it is always galling for a community that originates and develops a sport, to find others superior. This has been the case now for so many years, that it is no wonder the British Isles find the year of grace 1934 a year of glory. Supremacy has returned to England.

The open golf championship was won by a Briton for the first time in many years; not a single foreign crew, and there were three from America, won any prize at Henley; they were all beaten. The Wimbledon championship was won by an Englishman, Fred Perry, for the first time in 25 years; and the woman's championship was won by an English girl, Miss Dorothy Round, for the first time since 1924.

To crown all, the Davis Cup was successfully defended by two Englishmen, Fred Perry and H. Austin.

While Americans naturally want to see America victorious in every contest (as I certainly do) we can not begrudge England's rejoicing this year, over her succession of athletic victories. Furthermore, it is a good thing for the cause of sport.

The National Gallery

CARY TRAVERS GRAYSON, rear admiral, U. S. Navy, retired. Intimate friend, confidante of the Nation's stern War-time Executive, he was first attached to the White House under Theodore Roosevelt, whose love of Nature, horses, dogs and birds, he shared. Professionally, a poised, suave physician, he calmed the Nation's fears when the President's life was at ebb. Chairman of 1933 inaugural committee, ill-health has kept him from public office and political influence. Patrician born, a native of the Blue Grass, he has raced thoroughbreds, patronized hunt club meets, and directed local horse shows. Decorated by kings, he moves with Washington's chosen few. Shaggy brows shadow his merry eyes. Kindly, gentle, reserved, he speaks softly. A raconteur, his narratives amuse Carter Glass, a fellow worshiper at Wilson's shrine.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Receiver Is Asked For Coal Concern

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.). Harry Diehl has filed a bill of complaint in the Circuit Court against the Waddell-George's Creek Coal Co., asking a receiver be appointed to take over the affairs of the company.

Judge Albert A. Doub has signed an order for the defendant to show cause before September 12 why a receiver should not be appointed.

Diehl sets out that he was employed by the coal company in 1933 and sustained an injury to his right leg. He was awarded a 40 per cent partial disability by the Accident Commission and was to receive a compensation of $8.67 weekly from December, 1933, to April 25, 1934, with payment of medical and hospital expense.

Diehl claims that the company carried no compensation, as required, and has not paid the award. He further alleges the company is insolvent, pays no bills, and owes taxes, and has been for some time selling off its mine equipment, removing rails, &c., and does not intend to operate its mine. He says his hospital bill was $173.

Man Under Foster Name Rediscovers His Own Family

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—"Keeping up with the Joneses" is no easy task, Wilbur E. Lohman, of Waynesboro, finds.

Some time ago he discovered a sister whom he had never seen. His surname originally was Jones, but he assumed the name of Lohman, that of a family which reared him almost from birth.

His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Jones, near Fayetteville, Franklin County, read an account of his chance meeting with a sister. They discovered Lohman was their grandson. Communication followed. Lohman visited them. Then he continued to the Harrisburg section, where he visited two other sisters whom he had never seen.

Slayer of Husband Is Freed by Court

Shot to Protect Children and Herself.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 30 (AP).—Mrs. Mary C. Hickey, who shot and fatally wounded her husband, Charles E. Hickey, in their home last Thursday, was freed today after a hearing in domestic relations court. The action was recommended by Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold, who stated it had been thoroughly established that the woman fired to protect her own life and the lives of her two sons.

Hickey died in a hospital here from two bullet wounds.

Witnesses today testified that Hickey, drunk, had attacked his stepson, Willie Reynolds, and then turned on his own son, Edward Hickey, when the latter sought to protect his half brother. The man reached for his pistol, and at this point, witnesses said, Mrs. Hickey jerked the gun from Hickey's pocket, pressed the weapon against his body and fired twice.

Bride, 16, to Face Assault Charge

Winchester, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Mrs. Virgie Anderson Calvert, 16, bride of the late D. Landon Calvert, 76, is to be tried on a charge of assault and battery here Saturday in connection with the death of her husband.

Calvert died in a local hospital about ten days ago. He had been brought to the institution early in July suffering from a compound fracture of the leg, which was caused, he said, by Mrs. Calvert striking him with the blade of a hoe after they had an argument over digging potatoes. Mrs. Calvert was charged with assault and battery in a warrant issued by Trial Justice A. J. Tavenner, before whom the case will be heard.

The Calverts were married in June.

Mexican Polo Team Frequently Seen at Shoreham Terrace; English Atmosphere to Be Had at the Hob-Nob; Godfrey Returns Monday.

By Kay Ware.

It's all very well to be one of those people who always know what they want to do when. The catch comes when you have to pick a place to entertain some one else.

So keep a few suggestions in your vest vest pocket or handbag.

When you want soft lights, to ask important questions, try the Mayan room of the Madrillon.

When you dream of fair women, or their clothes, try the Mayflower cocktail lounge in the afternoon, later on also the Shoreham and the Powhatan roof.

When your proper maiden aunt comes to town and demands tea, take her to Woodward & Lothrop's tea room for a shot of candle light and suave service.

When celebrities are requested, look for them at Club Michel, or the Ambassador's Hi-Hat, or again the Shoreham. As well as all over town.

When you need fun, and a dash of Bohemia, and want noise so badly that a brass band wouldn't help, pick the Lowenkeller.

When it's beer that's wanted, there's the Heigh Ho tap, among many places.

When you just have to talk it all over, go to the Hamilton or Ramon's.

When the eating and drinking should be done with manner, there is the Carlton, as well as the before-named Shoreham, Mayflower and Powhatan.

Soft Music.

The Mayflower lounge has worked out a system that deserves patenting. It's a musical happy medium. The orchestra plays dance music for those who are in the mood to use it, but softly enough so that conversation is not disturbed. There is just enough music to make the atmosphere friendly.

The orchestra features two and three part violin harmonies on muted strings. Sidney's men play classical numbers frequently. Buddy Harmon, the drummer, is the vocalist especially favored by the debutantes.

They're full of clever ideas, at the Mayflower lounge. For example, their motto is large cocktails and small waiters. The cocktails need no explanation. As for the size of the waiters, they were selected for small stature and nimble feet, so they might move swiftly and easily through the indefinite aisles that result from the placement of occasional tables and small divans.

Mexican Dance Repeated.

The Mexican Polo Team, stopping at the Shoreham, may be seen out at the terrace almost any night. For their special benefit, the Reyes, the Cuban dance team, are repeating their Mexican hat dance.

Eva and Paul Reyes are also carrying on with the Rhumba, Cortez and Helene are doing Spanish dances, and, as remarked before, the dancing of La Fayette and La Verne is being featured this week.

La Fayette and La Verne are just back from a three-week vacation in Detroit, which was the setting for their romance that began seven years ago, and resulted a few weeks after meeting in their marriage and dance partnership.

Cortez and Helene made something of a record when they began to work together. They played in Buffalo the first time, and six weeks later they were featured at Roxy's, in New York. Helene's mother had planned a business career for her. She applied for a position as stenographer at a Spanish dance studio. She didn't get that job, but Cortez, who was one of the dancing teachers, strongly approved of her looks and asked her to dance with him. Immediate result—the partnership.

The diplomatic note was stressed among those watching the fashion show on Wednesday evening at Maryland Club Gardens. Among others, there were Joseph Moscicki, Secretary of the Polish Embassy; Gerald Walhavens, attache of the Belgian Embassy, and Carl H. Borgenstierna, attache of the Swedish Legation.

For a Good Cup of Tea.

When the shopping is done in the afternoon, ladies—or you're feeling English, gentlemen—there are plenty of quiet places where you can be sure of a good cup of tea.

For example, there is a Hob-Nob, down in the business section on F street. You have your choice between an English bar and a futuristic tea room.

Or there is the "moat," at Allies Inn, at Seventeenth street and New York avenue, where you'll find cool, gray stone walls, ferns and goldfish. If conversation runs dry, you may debate about what goldfish have to do with a moat.

Arlington Roof is very decidedly still going on. The best time to go if you want a nice big floor space to try out fancy steps is early in the week, because later it gets extremely crowded. Harry Albert's music is best when you have lots of room. Harry will serve you any musical fare you wish, and what's better, he'll serve it almost immediately.

Good dinners are to be had at the Arlington, and good drinks too, with cellophane straws in the long ones.

Ralon Completes Waltz.

Arsenie Ralon, who directs the Madrillon concert group, has just finished the composition of an unusually charming waltz.

It is neither in the French nor Viennese manner, but is essentially South American in spirit, languorous and slow, with a rhythm that stays with you.

The Madrillon, incidentally, has a very versatile cuisine. Besides its Spanish specialties, it also offers authentic Italian cookery, and in addition presents a large selection of American fare.

The Leon Brusiloff Orchestra plays for both dinner and supper dancing, while Ralon's concert music is featured at luncheon and at the early part of the dinner hour.

There's nothing like being popular. Arthur Godfrey, master of ceremonies at the Club Michel, is cutting short his vacation and will be at the Michel next Monday night.

If you like hill-billy songs, you'll like the way Tommy Suters, vocalist with the Godfrey orchestra, sings them. If you don't care for them, remember that there isn't much that Tommy doesn't know about present-day love songs.

And if you're looking for the Rhumba, Eva and Paul Reyes will be very much present at Club Michel.

La Paree is all a-bubble with fall plans. There will be an announcement shortly, meanwhile, you could cut the secrecy with a knife. All that can be pried out is that there will be a very special floor show.

Crooning in the Air.

If you want crooning, you may whet your appetite by a long trip up in the air. You ride farther up in the elevator to the Powhatan Roof than to any other roof garden in town.

Then, when you arrive, you will find all that Marty Rubin can do in the way of crooning, which is plenty. Pete Macias conducts his orchestra through a long program of request numbers.

The Anchorage, on the Annapolis boulevard at Severn River Bridge, will remain open throughout the fall, it has just been announced. There are special attractions every Saturday night, but dinner and supper dancing go on forever.

Fall is certainly rushing upon us. The new fall show opens next week at the Cotton Club with a new black and tan revue.

While sitting out of doors is still pleasant, and you're feeling like motoring across the river, stop at the Mount Vernon Shops. Gay little red and blue and yellow tables are set out on the brick terrace. And the waitresses, to keep in tune with the colonial atmosphere, wear long swishing skirts and demure kerchiefs.

Private Firms To Make Most Relief Shoes

Some Factories, However, Will Be Reopened for Jobless.

The job of making millions of shoes for the needy unemployed this winter is going to be divided between private manufacturers, who will handle the bulk of it, and idle factories reopened by State relief administrations.

Officials of the Federal Relief Administration made this disclosure yesterday to end speculation regarding disposition of hides from cattle purchased by the Government in the drought area.

They said the administration would rely principally on "going concerns" to tan the hides and convert them into shoes and other goods. State relief administrations—financed largely by Federal funds—will be permitted to lease shutdown factories and employ idle leather workers now on relief rolls.

Would Aid Relief.

In these work relief plants, the officials said, relief money would go farther toward reducing unemployment than in private plants because it all would go into wages and not into profit.

They explained only a small part of the work could be handled in such a way, however.

Questioners were reminded of a statement Wednesday by Harry L. Hopkins, Federal relief administrator, that treatment of the hides from the drought area cattle in general would "follow the same policy now being applied in the disposition of the meat."

Some Put to Work.

It was disclosed that some of the unemployed on relief rolls, who were experienced in slaughtering, boning and canning cattle, have been put to work in plants leased or otherwise made available to State relief administrations.

The relief administration wants to provide "shoes all around" for the more than 16,000,000 persons now on relief. Some shoes have been handed out by relief agencies in a number of States, but the need for millions more is seen by officials here. The amount of hides available for manufacture into shoes and other products for the needy will not be known until the slaughter program has progressed farther.

Romance, Divorces, Wedding End in Struggle for Child

Father Petitions Court for Custody of Daughter Now in Canada.

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (AP).—A strange marital mixup resulting from a Canadian romance was told in Superior Court here today when Max T. Francis petitioned for reversal of a decision granting the custody of his 5-year-old daughter, Maxine Lucille Turcotte-Francis, to her mother, Lucille Turcotte.

Attorneys related the romance between Francis and Mrs. Turcotte began several years ago in the Hudson Bay region of Canada.

Francis, a married man, met Mrs. Turcotte, also wedded, and later they went to San Francisco, where on December 9, 1929, a daughter was born to them.

Then they decided to divorce their respective wife and husband and be married. Francis obtained a divorce here and Mrs. Turcotte, returned to Canada and divorced her husband.

When she returned here after five months' absence, attorneys told Superior Judge I. L. Harris, she found Francis had married another woman.

Mrs. Turcotte appealed to the superior court and Judge Harris at that time decided she should have temporary custody of her daughter. But he confiscated a railroad ticket which she had purchased to go to Canada to insure her remaining here that the father might see the child.

Later Mrs. Turcotte, failing to find work, went to the home of her parents in the Hudson Bay country.

"The courts were too slow," the mother wrote to her attorney here. "I want my child. I love my daughter and I hope the courts will stretch a point so I can keep her."

In his appeal, Francis told the court he could provide a better home for the child than its mother could.

"You dissolve the order and I will go to Canada and bring the child back," Francis said. "It doesn't matter how I get her. I will get her."

Southwest Civic Leader Praises Chief's Stand for New Engines.

Efforts of Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom to educate the public to the dilapidated condition of the fire equipment now in service in the District were commended in a letter to the Commissioners sent yesterday by Dr. George L. Johnson, of the Southwest Civic Association.

"Southwest citizens," Dr. Johnson said, "won't be interested in the antiquated apparatus which will parade on Labor Day. We have been seeing such parades every time there has been a fire during the last 20 years.

"The only time we get a chance to see modern equipment," he continued, "is when modern Northwest and Southeast fire engines dash into the Southwest section, usually arriving at the fires before our own engines."

The only citizens to appear before the House sub-committee when the new hose wagons and pumping engines were authorized, according to Dr. Johnson, were members of the Southwest Civic Association.

Modern World Fires Children With New Ideas of What to Be When They Grow Up

Aviators and Torch Singers Become Rivals of Policemen

Playground Forum Reveals Youths of 12 Soberly Taking Stock of Chances for College Training in Professions.

By Mary Greenier Kelly.

SMALL, cherub-faced boys still dream of being big, strong policemen with billy clubs and brass buttons, or firemen with hose to squirt and ladders to climb—or maybe even President of the United States, when there isn't a more exciting job in sight. Curly-haired girls with front teeth missing still long to be heroic nurses on battlefields or school teachers with lots of naughty pupils to punish.

But these age-old ambitions of youth are supplemented by a wise variety of new ones today, some of which reflect the modern trend. Many potential railroad engineers have given way to future aviators and not a few sea captains have succumbed to the lure of playground athletics and decided to be football captains instead.

There was, for instance, that spontaneous round-table discussion at Montrose Park yesterday. It began in the ranks of the very young and crept automaticaly from one group to another until it included the ultra-sophisticated frequenters of the playground.

Sylvia Sings—Torch Style.

Red-haired Louis Westlein, 2½, held his crowd in awe as he announced his intention of joining the police force. Jimmie Thomas, 15 months, shouted him down with "I'm going to be a farmer!" Grabbing a garden hose, Bernie Studds, 3, countered:

"No old policeman can't put me in jail. I'm gonna be a fireman and ride down the street in a red engine. Clang, clang, here I come. Look out!"

But Bernie's demonstration met only cool indifference from Sylvia Levinson, 2½. With a nonchalant toss of her brown curls, she climbed on an improvised stage and chanted the words (oh, yes, and music) to "You Nasty May-an." Very provocative was Sylvia, as she rolled her eyes from Bernie to Louis to Jimmie, and tapped her small feet to the rhythm of the song. Sylvia, you see, is headed for a torch singing career, and makes no bones about it.

The more daring aviators and speed boat operators were discovered in the six-to-eight-year group, and many were the hair-raising adventures that went the rounds. Bravest of all, was Bobbie Smith, 7, who, as pilot of a mail plane, sliced the clouds in his imaginary manoeuvers.

Clear View Ahead at 12.

When boys and girls get to be 12 and 13 they think seriously about life and have a clear picture of what the future holds for them. There was Hugh Tolson, 13, who is definitely going to take up mechanical engineering.

"You see, as mechanical engineer," said Hugh, "I'll get to test all sorts of motors. I'll work on airplanes, motor boats and lots of things. I'll even get to go up in the planes to see that they run all right. If I have a crack-up in the test flight—well——" (Hugh's shrug was more eloquent than words of his fatalistic philosophy).

Flaming-haired Adrian Torreyson and brown-haired Freda Levinson, both 12, have mapped out their life work. They both love children, have demonstrated their interest and patience in the young by helping Mrs. Paul B. Woodruff, playground supervisor, and caring for Freda's baby sister. So they are going to start a nursery school when they are older. It will be an improvement over all such existing schools. But if any one who has children is interested, they had better talk it over with Freda and Adrian themselves. Their ideas would fill a book.

Ocean-Flying Hostess.

Mary Silcott, 12, is going to be an author. She has already demonstrated her writing ability in a clever four-year diary on her favorite doll. Sarah Carson, 11, will be a stenographer. She practices now by writing letters to her chums, while Alma Crockett, 12, with a flare for romance, aspires to be a transatlantic airplane hostess, and hold the heads of sick passengers.

Not quite so sure of themselves, but none the less ambitious, were the boys in the 15 to 18 year crowd. Some grew wistful over the uncertainty of college training and were willing to substitute the "next best thing" for their first choices.

Walter Beall, 17, who has carried a paper route for six years, has never developed a jaded appetite for the newspaper field. He wants to begin as a police reporter and end as a big-time editor. James Dice, 17, who always liked boats and despairs of getting to college, intends to take advantage of what training a Government school will give him and follow the sea.

In every crowd of boys there is likely to be a potential "Man on the Flying Trapeze." Morgan Ayres, 16, whose flexible muscles carry him through space, encircling the playground acting bars, has already qualified among his companions. Taking time out to impersonate Joe E. Brown, Jimmie Durante and Eddie Cantor, and to perform other clown-like contortions, Morgan's friends predict for him a brilliant future either in the movies or as America's leading circus operator.

Baseball and Theater.

William "Lefty" Whalen, 15, a crack baseball player, hopes to qualify as a big league southpaw some day. Series games are his favorite amusement, and he'd rather practice pitching trick curves than eat. Bernie Engle, a few years older, on the other hand, dreams of being a great Shakespearean actor. He began by playing Romeo in a high school play.

Girlish hearts at Montrose flutter over the crooning of Albert "Happy" Hardy, who can out-boo-boo-boo Bing Crosby and would like nothing better than to impersonate that personality on the radio.

"Ambition is born and nurtured on the playground," observed Mrs. Woodruff, who for 11 years has supervised the recreational activities of the younger children at Montrose Park. "Children's play is a serious business, and it often brings out talent that would otherwise lay dormant throughout a lifetime." Mrs. Woodruff's charges range from 15 months up to 12 and 13 years.

"We are privileged to see some of the greatest ambitions here realized," declared Coach Clint Price, in charge of the older boys. "We have seen boys who aspired to the legal field, graduate with high honors into law. It is the same with many who wanted to be doctors or go into business. Boys today are more serious about their futures than ever before. They realize the importance of higher education, and are willing to make personal sacrifices to attain college training."

Beauty Care Begins Early In Childhood

Infant's Natural Bent, if Let Alone, Will Form Correct Habits.

By Frances Mangum.

A CHILD is never too young to form fundamental "beauty" habits. From the time she toddles and lisps parents should emphasize the importance of brushing her hair and her teeth, of keeping her skin clean, and her nails groomed.

Old-fashioned mothers feel that by cultivating a young daughter's interest in her appearance they are "sowing the seeds of vanity and will reap conceit."

On the other hand, modern parents view the subject more broadly and see that by encouraging a child in such habits they are laying the corner stone to her future well-grooming.

Easier to Learn Young.

It isn't half so easy for adults to train themselves to care for their hair, their skin and their hands as it is for parents to train children. The little functions of hair brushing and manicuring come easily and naturally to those who have been taught that these are necessary for an attractive appearance.

Children have an instinctive tendency to make the best of their appearance, but it is a tendency sometimes nipped in the bud by parents who laugh at a child's attempt to make herself as pretty as possible.

From the first grade of school to her last year at high school it is the girl with nice skin and hands, and soft, lovely hair who wins the admiration of her fellow schoolmates. It often happens that because a child is teased or made conscious of her stubby, broken nails or her coarse, straggly hair that she will develop an inferiority complex that will last the rest of her life.

Discretion Is Necessary.

One young mother who strongly advocates teaching children beauty habits says she broke her daughter of biting her finger nails by taking her to a beauty salon and treating her to a manicure. After that the child was so proud of her nails that she wouldn't bite them for anything.

Of course, there are those parents who overdo this sort of thing by allowing their very young children to have permanents, to use rouge and even lipstick.

This can hardly be condoned, as a child's skin, if kept clean, is as smooth and pretty as it can be. Her hair, if shampooed regularly and brushed often, needs nothing but a good hair cut to make it all it should be.

Youths Resurrect Beards of Artists

London Elders Shave Clean, but Juniors Bristle.

London, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—What is art without a beard—on the artist's chin? The older and more successful artists of London have abandoned the picturesque hirsute appendages, which have so long been associated with painter's palette and sculptor's chisel.

They have changed so that they can not be distinguished from similarly close-shaved, short-haired lawyers, bankers and business men.

Not so the younger students of the arts. They undoubtedly have little respect for the opinions, or technique which their elders once held, but they are still less in sympathy with their smug air of clean-shaven respectability.

These younger members of the art colony of Chelsea and Bloomsbury astonished the visitors at the recent presentation of diplomas at the Royal College of Art.

They sported beards of every hue, shape and texture known to a Russian barber. There were long ones and abbreviated; black, brown and yellow beards; silken ones and beards big and bushy enough for a stork to nest in, and in many cases the hair was long enough to braid as well.

However, the dignity which is associated with beards and whiskers was missing in this Bohemian-looking lot.

PILLAR To POST

WHAT poets like for breakfast (even though they don't eat regularly); the latest thing in attic decor, what the worst dressed poets are wearing this season; these and kindred subjects are to be publicized by Earl A. Cuevas, high-powered promotor and president of the Poet Laureate League, Inc. He proposes to use all the modern mediums such as radio, magazines and newspapers to acquaint the public with the personalities of the poets of America.

• • • •

"If poetry is to become popular and if we are to have great poets," said Mr. Cuevas, "we must create an interest in the poets themselves. Where would Jean Harlow, Clark Gable and Mary Pickford be if nothing was ever written about their private lives and only their work in pictures commented upon?"

• • • •

Mr. Cuevas is indignant about the way poets are treated. A man can make a living by almost any talent except the talent for verse writing, he says.

"Most poets must earn their livelihood by denying their life for the best hours of each day. Many poems are penned with calloused hands in tenement attics and some in jails."

The president of the Poet Laureate League, Inc. does not subscribe to the popular theory that poets must experience privations and hardships in order to produce masterpieces.

• • • •

Mr. Cuevas is a practical man and only writes poetry for his own amusement and for that of his lady friends, he says, and he is more interested in poets than he is in poetry. At present he is employed in the NRA.

There is going to be a meeting of the league in Philadelphia on September 1. Gertrude Jane Codi, Inez Sheldon Tyler, John Lee Higgins and George Horton are among the Washington poets who will attend.

Town Riled by Woman Smoking Pipe in Public

Northumberland, Pa., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Residents here recently were astonished to see a woman strolling down the street drawing contentedly on a pipe. The chief of police was summoned. He said, however, that nothing could be done, as there is no law here to prevent women from smoking.

"Sure I like my pipe," replied the woman, whose name the chief would not reveal, "I spent enough time breaking it in."

New York Revue Shows Off Fashions Rolling in Luxury

Frances Williams Rivets Feminine Eyes on Bejeweled Satin Gowns of Newest Mode in "Life Begins at 8:40."

WITH ALL the hey-nonny nonny of a big revue and pleasant remarks from the critics, the Shubert "Life Begins at 8:40" opened this week in New York, causing interest not only from the point of view of slightly salacious and hilarious entertainment, but from the angle of costuming.

Blue-voiced and lissome Frances Williams moved through her numbers clothed in the best Park Avenue manner. Her entrance outfit started the feminine part of the audience envying. She wore a slightly longer than three-quarters tunic over a white satin and very slithery dress. The tunic was in pansy blue and held in place over the Williams hips by jeweled buckles. There was another buckle at the neckline.

The monk's hood which jumped into fashion several months ago now makes its appearance on the stage. The version worn by Miss Williams was a part of a long white satin cape and tied in front.

A likely looking and agile chorus dances its way through the show clothed in many numbers in costumes which borrow tricks from "periods." The 90's are represented by the off-the-shoulder decolletages in costumes done in sheer gray. From the 1780's there are intriguing bodices made in a series of inset bands and bows, and overskirts divided in the front and draped to the sides of bouffant skirts. Straight twentieth century are the metal pullovers worn in another number. These brief affairs appear in company with very red and very short shorts.

Comedian Bert Lahr makes one of his sputtering entrances as Balzac, which calls for a double-breasted coachman coat with postillion capes, complemented by the correct picture hat of the period.

Fashion has prophesied a luxurious winter, and this revue carries out the forecast to the extent of draping the chorus in such rich materials as lames, satins and velvets. These are developed in costumes that depend more on material and line than on extraneous trimmings and trappings—all in the very best 1934-35 manner.

Modernism and Kitchens Agree

Old English Homes Have Contemporary Trims That Harmonize.

FEW things would be more ridiculous than a modern kitchen completely decorated in the early English or eighteenth century French manner.

Yet to emerge into a brightly modern, tubular chromium kitchen when every other room in the house is in keeping with it's old English architecture is a distinct shock.

Is there any way in which the modern kitchen and the English cottage can harmonize happily? There certainly is. Just have the kitchen accessories in English design.

Recent designs in oil cloth kitchen trimmings show the modern kitchen can fit into the period house.

There are six designs in these trimmings, each carried out consistently in an ensemble of accessories and shelving. One is called "Old English," and is especially designed for the simple English cottage so popular in America. It is a not-too-positive plaid, sprigged with nosegays, and bordered with dainty crinolined figures in a formal walled garden.

French lace is another plaid which suggests cross-stitching and old samplers. "Early American" is a gay, vivid design, which reflects the Mexican influence on decor. "Daisy" is a simple floral design, and the "plaid," which is a brilliant, bold design, was copied directly from an old Scotch tartan.

These designs can be used for closet shelving, seat pads, pot-holders, tablecloths and such. Red will be the most important color for kitchens this season.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am sending this problem in to you because its solution might help many others besides myself. It is one which I believe quite frequently handicaps young people.

I am engaged to a young man who—it seems to me—is overly sensitive about being criticized. On the other hand, so am I. To make matters worse both of us have the abominable habit of finding fault. If the things that vexed us were large things it probably wouldn't be so bad, but unfortunately they're so small as to be merely bothersome.

• • • •

If he wears the wrong necktie, or speaks too loudly, if I have on too much rouge, or laugh at the wrong time—the fault never goes unmentioned, and a petty quarrel results. Please don't say "stop nagging" as we've both tried to do that and failed. Do you think there's any answer?

BEWILDERED.

Try Christian Charity.

DEAR BEWILDERED: Petty nagging has its roots in many soils; in spirits too small to embrace the civilized philosophy of live and let live; in the mental dyspepsia which develops when one hasn't sufficient interest to occupy one's mind; in temperamental incompatability—that almost chemical irritation which occasionally springs up between two persons and can neither be ignored nor overcome, and which may be nature's warning to them to keep apart; sometimes in a person's well meant, if mistaken, efforts to reshape another's personality in accordance with his own image of what is ideal.

• • • •

Sometimes, too, it comes from thoughtlessness; from an absent-minded remarking on things all of us think, occasionally, about the idiosyncrasies of others, but take care—as we value friendship, love, or good will—not to voice.

• • • •

Whatever the cause, nagging is death and destruction to harmonious living. What we seek to gain by nagging can be better obtained by following the outline suggested almost daily in these modern times by child psychologists; praise the good points of the person you wish to improve, and pass silently over the more distressing habits.

Build up in the other's mind a picture of the image of perfection you see—or profess to see—him to be, and in 99 cases out of 100, he will soon be striving to live up to it.

Soured, embittered and dejected over too much carping criticism, the object of our reformer's zeal is likely to lapse into a surly defiance or indifference to our opinions; and may develop a sense of inferiority which leads him to believe any attempts to please or to improve are useless.

• • • •

Remember, too, it is well to take the beam from one's own eye before attempting to remove the mote from another's. None of us are sufficiently free of irritating idiosyncrasies as to be entitled to hurl biting comment at the faults of others. In other words, cultivate a little Christian charity and forbearance toward your fiance's shortcomings—if such they really are—and ask him to do the same toward yours.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Family Newspaper Comes Out Weekly

"Marshall Bulletin" Boasts Big Circulation.

Without circulation or advertising departments, minus printers and hired hands of any sort, the Marshall Family Bulletin has appeared regularly every Monday for the last two years, according to the United Press.

The family weekly paper is edited by 71-year-old Ben Marshall, of Frankfort, Ky., and his wife. Its purpose is to circulate family gossip to the Marshalls' 8 sons, 5 daughters and 24 grandchildren, scattered over the Nation, and in this way cut letter writing to a minimum. Every member of the family sends weather comments, poetry of their own composition, recipes, bits of family news and changes of address of the "subscribers."

The paper was born at the suggestion of the senior Marshall that his wife might make carbon copies of her letters and cease so much creative effort.

Volunteers' Midnight Alarms Break Many Neighbors' Sleep

But Their Neighborly Kindness and Tireless Duty in Small Town Crises Win Fierce Loyalty of Each New Householder.

By Grace Talbot Brown.

WHEN the plumply earnest rental agent—her shiny, eager nose wriggling with each word—was carefully reciting the advantages of life in the near-country, the excellent protection given by the volunteer fire department was a high-pressure point in the sales talk. But no mention was made of the gentleman next door or of the fire sirens located atop conveniently spaced telephone poles one to each block. We learned all about that around 2 o'clock the morning after we had painfully and hopefully moved into the quiet suburban home, where only crickets were supposed to lull us to sleep.

With a startling suddenness, we found ourselves sitting up in bed clutching futilely at light chains that hadn't yet been put in place. Our hearts were pounding. "That hellish noise—what is it?"—an impromptu family consultation pronounced it a fire alarm, and a hurried search proved that it wasn't our house aflame; so back to bed.

The following afternoon, our 4-year-old was playing with newfound acquaintances in a cool, sandy spot close by what seemed to be an ordinary inarticulate telephone pole.

A Telephone Pole Shrieks.

Suddenly the staid old pole came to life with a fiendish shriek. The baby was paralyzed for an instant. Then, "Mama, Mama-a-a!" came his terrified cries, mingled with the moan of the fire siren. The half-hung pictures in Mama's startled hands crashed to the floor. She sprinted to the rescue of her young son, whose anguished leaps brought him speedily to safety within her arms.

Next day the youngster was lustily joining the other children in their siesta-shattered imitation of the fire call.

And astonishingly soon we found ourselves buying, of all things, tickets to the firemen's balls and fetes, and recklessly patronizing the Ladies' Auxiliary cake sales—after all, our house might catch on fire some day.

Our volunteers don't go only to fires either.

There was a tragedy in our block. We called for an ambulance and the police, and surprisingly enough the by-now familiar fire alarm started its clamor. Soon the entire department clanged to a stop at our curb. They gave first-aid to the injured—one of the fire trucks was the ambulance—and comforted the frantic child left behind. Perhaps not with the cool ease of urban officers, but certainly with dispatch and warm, if excited, sympathy.

A Lawyer's Double Life.

It wasn't long before we were taking an inordinate pride in the speed with which the man next door answered the alarm. He wears a fireman's hat, so we know he must be of considerable importance; or else, he's having lots of fun. During the day, we learn, he is a lawyer with all proper dignity. Each night on coming home from work he carefully backs his car into his garage, so nothing will hold up his headlong run to the fire. And with a thrill we soon discover that he is into his chariot and away before the siren can take its second breath.

One Sunday afternoon we were entertaining guests on our side lawn. Without warning, the Tarzan cry of the alarm shattered our quietude. We reassured our jittery company, then boastfully pointed out our neighbor's garage, and told them to watch—"He'll dash out now in just a minute." We held our breaths—but he didn't come. Finally, we just had to breathe, in spite of our disappointment. He would show us up, just when we were trying to show off to our city visitors. The third, then fourth alarm was sounded. Too late.

"Bragging again——"

"Bang!" went his back screen against the side of the house. A tousle-headed, bath-robed figure bounced out on to the back porch, leaving wet barefooted prints behind him. His wife looked up sympathetically from the flower bed she was tending.

"I missed that fire," he spluttered, "but it's the first one. Caught me right in the middle of my bath."

Question of No Teeth And Longevity Unsolved

Does pulling teeth cause a person to live a long life? Some say it does, and some say it does not.

Dr. Thomas Darlington, Tammany veteran, is a firm believer in the theory that plenty of healthy teeth are necessary for life extension. He brushes his teeth seven times a day to prevent decay, and boasts that he intends to live to be 120.

On the other hand, 90-year-old Dan O'Leary, who died last year, advised, "Have all your teeth pulled."

But crocodiles have teeth as long as they live. But the armadillo never has any.

Arkansans Push Illiteracy Drive

700 Teachers Prepare for Winter Work.

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Into the canebrake and remote regions will go this winter 700 or 800 teachers to instruct illiterate river bottom settlers and mountain people in the rudiments of education.

In line with a new educational experiment the instructors will not be "outlanders," but educated members of the communities into which they will go, people who have the confidence of their neighbors.

Seven hundred persons have enrolled in these adult classes since the original program was launched last winter as a part of emergency relief work. This winter's plan is expected to reduce considerably the State's remaining quota of 96,918 illiterates.

Pride in their new accomplishments of reading and writing was manifested in the river bottom country, one teacher reports. Many of the pupils stopped going to town and mailed orders for supplies and merchandise or sent notes by neighbors.

Spaniards Under 16 Barred From Politics

Madrid, Aug. 30 (AP).—Boys less than 16 years old are forbidden to be members of political organizations in an attempt by the government to reduce injuries among "irresponsible minors" and to release from jails large numbers of youths held for political offenses. The decree mentioned many boys have been killed in street riots and demonstrations.

Under this new law, boys between 16 and 23 may join political organizations only if they have written consent of their parents.

Baking Kansans Forget Taboo on Bare Legs

Emporia, Kans., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Hot weather makes liberals—at least it has in Emporia, where 12 years ago Pavlowa put the town aghast when she danced barelegged, but where the scantiest of shorts are being worn now. There have been no protests, there have even been good words for the fashion. Editor William Allen White, of the Emporia Gazette, approves and says so.

The scandal of Pavlowa's unclad legs is hardly recalled as the clubwomen who objected to her display are so far outdoing the dancer in brevity of attire in an attempt to be cool.

Fall Suede Gets a Sparkle.

Patent leather, usually a spring trimming, is making a fall appearance on the smart shoes. It's usually combined with suede to lift the latter's soft darkness into sparkle. Although patent leather is seen most often in black, trimming black shoes, it is also being shown in brown suede.

Rodeos Afford Equestriennes' Greatest Thrill

Broncho-Busting Has Place With Hunting, Polo and Racing.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

RIDING goes by stages. There's the sedate, bridle-path type, that calls for an excellent habit and a good line of conversation. There's hunting, polo and racing, for people who like a little exercise with their horses. Then there's the rodeo.

Rodeos have a habit of meaning cowboys, former cowboys and imitation cowboys. But quite frequently there are women who go in for broncho-busting with the best of the men.

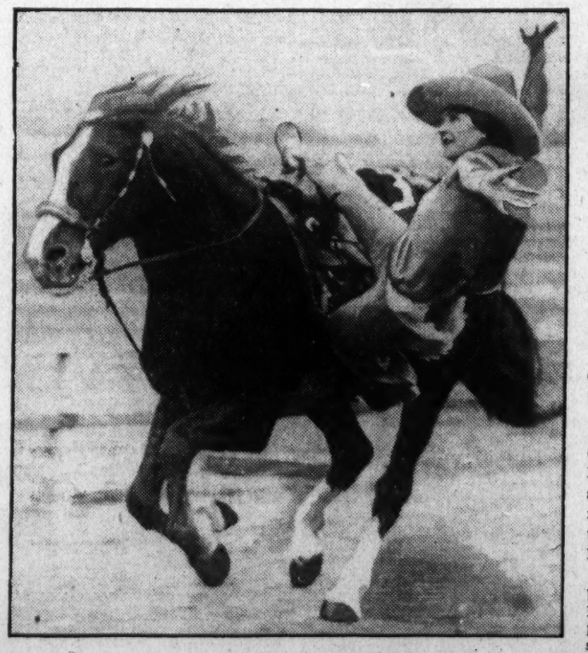
Mabel Strickland, who has the title of the world champion cowgirl, if there is such a word, has carried off a stable full of prizes. She is seen when the rodeo comes to town, almost any town, and she's apt to be riding almost anything.

She has recently been injured seriously doing stunt riding. One of her most famous stunts, going completely round her horse and under his belly, while he's going full tilt, has the skill of Cossack riding.

Mabel Strickland's record as the fastest woman roper in the world, with a time of 21 2-5 seconds for bringing down a steer, is part of the routine for her. She further breaks "outlaw broncos," which the cowboys themselves consider hopeless.

As far as tricks are concerned, she doesn't leave any out. She goes around a horse's neck, does double vaulting, and stands upside down in the saddle.

In spite of all this strenuous living, she is very feminine, and she has managed to keep her complexion untouched by the weather. She swims and plays golf and tennis, though not when a horse is handy. She is married to an expert cowboy, and probably will pass along the riding germ to her 14-year-old daughter.



When Mabel Strickland was a child her father had a ranch. Riding was the natural way of getting anywhere. But she didn't have any interest in trick riding until a circus rider drifted through. She imitated him and soon built up a repertoire. She was riding in exhibitions and competitions at high school age.

"Standing on a horse's back bareback, while he is going, is an excellent exercise in balance," Mabel Strickland says. To an ordinary mortal, it would seem more sensible to learn a lot about balance before doing any standing on active horses.

Store Offers Durable Toys For Children

Pell-Mell Play or Hard Scrubbing Will Not Feaze These.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

RUB 'em, tub 'em, scrub 'em. They come up smiling!

This is the slogan for a certain type of children's clothes sold at a local store. There are little girls' school dresses, kindergarten frocks, and an assortment of junior styles.

These dresses have been carefully planned to look distinctive and to wear well. Parents will all admit there's no use dolling up a youngster who thinks more of climbing a tree or crawling through hedges than of keeping the pleats in her frock. Nevertheless they can't dress her in just anything. There are always the neighbors who raise their eyebrows and the friends who pityingly say, "but children will be children!"

These dresses offer an inexpensive and practical way out of the dilemma. Because they'll take the wear and tear, and because they are smart looking, and because they are so sensibly priced, Washington parents can find no better outfits for their children, be they tiny tots or of high school age.

The smallest girls' dresses come in sizes 7 to 10, and the juniors from 10 to 16. All of them are preshrunk, fast-color cottons, plain or printed. The styles are interesting and different.

Powder-and-Cream Bargain.

Here's a very sensible offer which sells for $1.10. A box of excellent face powder—ordinarily that price by itself—is accompanied now by a jar of liquefying face cream.

Shoppers have little difficulty in finding interesting "buys" of this kind, but usually they're of some little-known make, or else there's only one product one really wants. Not in this case, though. The powder is good. There's no evading that. And the liquefying face cream is one of the best.

Most women who use creams to cleanse their faces prefer the liquefying type. It seeps into the pores and floods out the dust. After it is removed the skin is as soft and free of dirt and make-up as the most precise person can ask.

Satchel That Can "Take It."

While the children are crowding all the fun they can into the last of the holidays, parents are on the lookout for school equipment. If they stop by the stationery department of a downtown store they will see something they can't resist. It's a schoolbag, but such a schoolbag! Back in their old golden rule days, 15 or 20 years ago, there was nothing like this!

The bag is cut from waterproof fabric. A zipper pouch on the side is large enough to hold an ample lunch. Inside are five tablets of different sizes, and a fully equiped pencil box containing numerous pencils, a set of crayons, and an eraser.

The handle of the bag is attached to a reinforced portion so swinging and flinging it around won't cause it to fall apart. There are four colors to choose from, blue, green, red and tan.

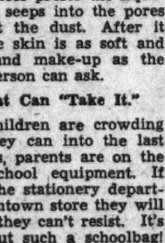
To Keep Drinks Straight.

Klipsies are the smartest kind of identification tabs for cocktails, highballs, napkins, and cups. They are small, little metal figures cut in the shape of a fish, monkey, Scottie, horse and rider, elephant, giraffe, camel, and rooster. These are available in colors or in plain silver finish.

Hosts and hostesses know what confusion results from the constant filling and refilling of glasses. If they will clip a tab on the rim of the glass the confusion is ended.

Shaving by Electricity.

A razor that is not a razor! That's what the manufacturers say about a new shaving device that most people call an electric razor. It's nothing of the sort, insists the company. It's a dry shaver.



No matter what it's called, it removes the hair from the face comfortably and closely, while at the same time gently massaging the skin. Because there are no sharp blades and no moving parts to touch the face, it's impossible to cut yourself. For this reason, ladies frequently prefer this device to ordinary razors or depilatories.

This shaver never gets dull, and there's none of the inconvenience of honing and changing blades.

Beads for Playthings.

Some multicolored beads are suggested for young children to play with—but not to wear. There are large holes all the way through them so that even the clumsiest fingers can string them. Playing with such beads gives a child training in numbers and color combinations.

Liquid Wax Saves Toil.

The drudgery of waxing the floor is reduced by half—or so it seems, which is just as good—if a certain type of liquid floor wax is used.

A downtown store which caters to the needs of housewives has bottles of this wax priced very moderately. It's very easy to apply, lasts a long time and gives an exceptionally polished finish.

Heavier salads will be in order soon, and you'll need these delicious dressings to accompany them.

Mayonnaise Dressing.

One egg yoke, 2 tablespoons vinegar or lemon juice, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, paprika to taste, 1 or 2 drops tabasco, ¾ to 1 cup salad oil.

Mix seasonings with 1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice, add yolk of egg, beat slightly. Begin adding oil, teaspoon or two at a time, beating thoroughly each time. When mixture is thick add remaining acid, gradually beat in rest of oil.

Dressing for Cabbage Slaw.

2 eggs, ¼ cup water, ¼ cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon mustard, 1-16 teaspoon celery seed, 2 tablespoons butter or other fat.

Beat eggs, add all ingredients except fat and cook in double boiler until thickened. Stir constantly and just before removing from fire, add fat. Pour over cabbage while hot. If served as cold slaw, chill after dressing is added.

Cooked Dressing for Meat and Vegetable Salads.

Two whole eggs or 4 yolks, ¼ cup vinegar, 2 tablespoons butter or other fat, 5 tablespoons cream cheese, 2 tablespoons cream, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon mustard, dash of paprika, ⅛ teaspoon celery seed, 3 drops tabasco.

Beat eggs and vinegar together until smooth. Cook mixture in double boiler, stir constantly until consistency is thick cream. Remove at once from heat, add fat and cream cheese, and stir until mixture is smooth. Then add cream and seasonings. Cream cheese may be omitted, and more cream, either sweet or sour, used. About 1 cup of dressing.

If a woman whose natal day is August 31, your artistic nature should not only enable you to get a great deal of joy out of life, but provide an excellent means for a very profitable livelihood. How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Botulism.

THE disease called botulism is caused by a virulent poison produced by the bacillus botulinus. It is ordinarily considered a form of food poisoning, inasmuch as the bacillus botulinus may grow in inadequately preserved food, such as meat, fruits or vegetables.

Most cases of botulism are traced to the consumption of home-canned fruits and vegetables. Some difficulty is encountered in home canning in completely destroying the bacillus because the spores of seeds are exceedingly resistant to heat. The bacillus itself grows luxuriantly at a temperature of about 100 degrees Fahrenheit. Much higher temperatures are required to kill the organisms and still higher temperatures to kill the spores. When vegetables or fruits are not thoroughly cooked and are placed in sealed airtight jars, sports of the organism will grow, if present, resulting in the production of one of the most virulent toxins known to science.

The onset of the symptoms of botulinus poisoning is rarely under 12 hours nor more than 36 hours after the ingestion of food containing the toxin. Weakness, prostration and disturbance of vision are among the early symptoms. As a rule, the patient does not at first think he is very ill.

Later there is dryness of the mouth and a feeling of constriction in the throat. Perhaps at this time water may be swallowed, but the symptoms increase to severity and soon the patient will strangle if he attempts to swallow liquids.

Treatment is as yet unsatisfactory, as the preparation of antitoxin is still in the experimental stage.

Positive prevention consists in cooking thoroughly all foods that are to be placed in air-tight containers and set aside for future use.

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

Deborah's grandfather tied up her fortune so that she could not make the mistake her mother did and elope with a stranger. By the will she must marry the son of Courtney Graham, whom her mother jilted. But the youth is not the man his father was; he wants only Deborah's money. To prevent the marriage, and disaster to Deborah, a wealthy young man named Bryn marries her; the two of them agree to let her grandmother believe that Bryn is actually Stuart Graham. The young couple, married on the Coast, go to live on grandmother's lonely mountain ranch. Deborah believes Bryn is in love with another girl. Bryn is certain Deborah does not care for him.

HER HAND fell on the heavy brown cloth she had worn in San Francisco; suddenly remembering, her cheeks burned. It was a horrible dress, and the black hat she had worn with it was impossibly ugly. Perhaps he had gone straight to his own girl after he had taken her back to the hotel, when he had made her promise that she wouldn't go back home until he had called on Monday morning. Perhaps he and the girl had talked it over, this opportunity that had come his way.

Deborah jerked the brown dress from the rack and threw it on the floor. She stamped on it, flung herself on the bed and cried miserably.

After a long time she sat up and dried her eyes. There wasn't anything to cry about. What if they had laughed at her? She would never see the girl, and the girl would never see her. As for the man, they were as distant from each other as any two people could possibly be, who had to act at intervals an affectionate little comedy. The other night she had tried, it was true, to be friendly. She had tried to tell him how sorry she was that he had been hurt while trying to help her, and he hadn't allowed her to be friendly. He had been cold and unresponsive, and she hated him for it. But it was better for him to be so. There wasn't anything between them but the relation of an employer to a servant; he had said so himself. That was the way he had wanted it to be. Very well. The thing to do was to be calm and impersonal when they were alone. Grandmother paid far more attention to him nowadays than she did to Deborah, and if any question of difference arose, she always added her weight to his. It was the same with Gary. It hurt.

And even the puppy had climbed into the car with him today as he set off for town, deliberately leaving her, without a backward glance.

In a year, Deborah remembered after a little, in a year less two weeks, she needn't feel ignorant and badly dressed any longer. She would have plenty of money. She could buy the loveliest clothes in the world, and have her hair cut, and have her fingernails painted, and learn how to manage all the things the girls in the city seemed to have. Cars, and purses, and all the things in their purses, and jewelry, and the right kind of hats. It would take time, but it could be done.

She Visits Bryn's Room.

She got down from the bed and tiptoed to the door. No one was about, she knew that. The maids had been here for two days, and the cook as well, but they were all down in the living room with Gary, putting it in order.

She closed her door softly behind her and went down the hall quickly to Bryn's room. She went in, after a moment's hesitation. After all, this was her house. She had a right to go where she pleased.

The room was a little bare-looking. Gary hadn't done much to make it look pleasant. There was a plain white spread on the bed, and no overhangings at the window. There was a small uncovered writing table before the window, and nothing on the dresser save a pair of brushes and one or two other articles which added nothing to the decoration of the room. A pile of clean handkerchiefs which should have been in the dresser drawer. She opened the drawer quietly and put the handkerchiefs inside. There was a welter of socks in the corner. Not one but was full of holes, and not a single extra pair for him to wear. Well, she didn't care. He could buy plenty of socks with the money Mr. Holworthy was lending them, and charge them to her at the end of the year. She shut the drawer.

On the writing table she found what she was looking for. A box of cigarettes. With hasty fingers she took one out and dropped it into her pocket. She slipped down the hall as if she were pursued, down the stairs. Grandmother, sitting on the veranda, heard her, and called; but Deborah pretended not to hear and went down the path to her old playhouse.

Here, secure from prying eyes, she sat down comfortably and took the cigarette from her pocket.

She looked at it carefully, wondering which end to put in her mouth, but there didn't seem to be any difference. She put it in, gripped it firmly with her teeth to hold it steady. The tobacco seemed to be sticking to her tongue. She tried to spit it out, but almost swallowed it instead. Tobacco was horrible to the taste. It was like vanilla, apparently; very nice to smell but dreadful to taste undiluted. She pulled out a few loose pieces of tobacco at the end of the cigarette, but the more she pulled, the more ends came out. Finally she put it back between her lips and tried holding her tongue away from it. The end of the cigarette was getting a little wet.

"Thank You, I Don't Smoke."

She scratched the match and held it to the cigarette. No curl of white smoke went up. The match burned down to the end. She took the cigarette out and regarded it, puzzled. Oh. Of course. How silly.

Competently, she put it back in her mouth and scratched another match. This time she drew a long breath. The smoke went down into her lungs. She was choking. She coughed violently. She looked at the cigarette.

Well, who wanted to smoke, anyway? The cigarette went into the water.

"I don't smoke," she said to herself, and practiced it again. "Thank you, I don't smoke." There. That matter was finally disposed of, and somehow, she felt a great deal better.

Deborah walked slowly back to the house. The sun was already dropping toward the western hills. In the garden the men had turned on the spray of the new watering system that had been installed.

From the road outside the wall came the steady hum of an approaching motor. He had made a very quick trip. The car turned in and came cautiously up the drive not with its usual swift rush to the house.

She looked more closely now, and saw that this was not the big car at all. And it was not Bryn driving. She stopped on her way around the house; the car slid up to her. The driver was smiling, a wide friendly smile. He took off his hat and waved it, and jumped out almost befor the car was still.

It was Mr. Forbes.

"Here I am," he said cheerfully. "Don't say you don't remember me!"

"Of course I remember you," Deborah said smiling. "It's only a little more than two weeks."

He took her outstretched hand. He smiled down at her, the warmest and most comfortable kind of smile. "We didn't have much chance to get acquainted," he said. "And, after all, girls aren't expected to remember much about their own weddings, are they?"

"It wasn't a such a large wedding," Deborah reminded him.

"But, however, adequate. Do say that it was adequate."

"Quite adequate," Deborah replied gravely.

"Where's Bryn?"

"He's gone to town. You must have passed him there."

Tubby Brings a Butler.

"Well, he'll come back," Tubby said with assurance, and motioned toward the man who had come with him. "I've brought the new butler."

"Oh." Deborah's eyes flickered over the grave and dignified mien of the new butler. "I'll call Gary," she decided.

In a moment he came, puffing, his coat only half on. "This is Gary. Mr. Forbes," she told Tubby. "Mr. Forbes is . . . is Bryn's best friend." she informed Gary. "He has brought us a butler. You will take care of him, Gary, and Mr. Forbes, too; I must run and tell Grandmother." She smiled again at Tubby.

"Who was that, dear?" Grandmother inquired.

"It's . . . a Mr. Forbes, Grandmother. I told you about him. Bryn calls him Tubby. Because, I suppose, he looks like a little boy who's just had a very hot bath."

"Deborah, my darling!"

"And the man with him is the new butler. Gary is taking care of them."

Grandmother sighed contentedly. "I can scarcely believe it," she murmered. "It is exactly what I had hoped for you, my child."

"Grandmother, did you know that Mr. Forbes was coming?"

"No, dear. Nor you?"

"I wasn't told. I thought your permission might have been asked."

"It needn't have been asked. This is Bryn's home, Deborah. He has every right to ask his friends here. Don't you like him, dear?"

"I liked what I saw of him very much. He's so . . . so cheerful and friendly. So guileless. That's the word I mean."

"He must be very nice if he is Bryn's best friend. I shall be glad to make his acquaintance."

Footsteps sounded in the hall just inside the open door, and Tubby appeared in the doorway.

"Grandmother, this is Mr. Forbes," she murmered. He looked very nice indeed in a suit of gray-blue, a perfectly tailored suit. Deborah found herself in a panic lest Tubby did not know that there were certain things Grandmother must not be allowed to discover. She looked anxiously out toward the road, hoping to hear the sound of the big motor; Bryn would take care of this situation.

"I am so glad you have come," Grandmother was saying. "I have suggested to Bryn that we might have some of his friends come and visit us, but as yet we have been so busy putting the house and ourselves in order."

Tubby was frankly staring at her. "Do you call him Bryn now?" he inquired.

Almost Spills the Beans.

"Yes. He explained it to me. Of course I did not mind. I have become very fond of him, even in this short time. It doesn't matter what he is called."

"Uh . . . no," Tubby admitted.

"You have known him a long time, Mr. Forbes?"

"Yes," Tubby was beginning, comfortably.

Deborah swallowed. "Doesn't the new butler mind coming to such an isolated place as this is?" she asked.

"Oh, it will be a nice change for him," Tubby said

A stately figure appeared in the doorway, bland and serene, with a small silver tray holding a bell.

"Oh," Tubby said. "Mrs. Larned, this is Burch. I think he will be able to make you comfortable."

"How do you do, Burch," Grandmother said gently. His movements were quietly majestic. He began to withdraw.

"Hi," Tubby called after him. "Bring me my bag, Burch."

Presents for the Bride.

In a few moments he returned with a heavy pigskin bag. Tubby looked at Deborah.

"I've brought you some wedding presents," he said with his fascinating lisp. "There wasn't time to tell anyone before you left San Francisco. The city is buzzing."

"Oh, dear," Deborah said faintly.

Nobody heard her. Grandmother was looking very proud. "His is a very old family, of course," she said.

Tubby drew forth a tissue-wrapped box. "This is from my sister Sally," he explained.

Deborah unwrapped the tissue paper. There, in the white velvet lining, lay a whole suite of rose-colored crystals, exquisitely cut. The long strand of the necklace dropped to her waist; the earrings were pendant on silver chains; there were two sparkling bracelets and a beautiful ring. Deborah looked at them.

"Is your sister Sally a very great friend of Bryn's too?"

"Yes, indeed. They've adored each other for years."

"Adored each other?" Grandmother said in a small voice. Deborah was gazing at the crystals calmly.

"Rather. Why, when Sally and Simon used to quarrel it was always Bryn that Sally went to for sympathy . . . I don't think they'd ever have got through if it hadn't been for Bryn."

"Who is Simon?" Deborah heard herself saying.

"Simon? Oh, he's Sally's husband. They're crazy about each other, but they did quarrel until they were married. Now, here," Tubby went on, holding out a flat round parcel with the other. "This is from me. It's the only way you'd ever get it," he muttered, his head in the bag.

Bryn's Photograph.

Deborah unwrapped the parcel silently. Inside, looking out from a beautiful silver frame, was Bryn's face.

Grandmother took it and held it silently before her. After a moment Deborah saw her fumbling for her handkerchief.

"There," Tubby said, lifting a fiery red face. "Now this is from Madeline."

It was a most exquisite rose-colored silk shawl covered with pale-blue embroidered flowers in small perfect stitches, and a long pale-blue fringe. Deborah's hand caressed the heavy silk. "Is Madeline your sister, too?"

"Well, no," Tubby said, with what seemed to her a hint of embarrassment. "She's Simon's sister, so, of course, she's practically in the family. She's an extremely nice girl."

"Has she been a friend of Bryn's all his life, too?"

"Well, yes. Practically."

"Do they . . ." Her violet eyes were fixed on his face. She waited.

Tubby coughed. "You know how it is," he explained with a wave of his hand. "All the girls are crazy about Bryn. They're bound to be a little upset to think he's married now and gone."

"Is Madeline upset?"

Tubby laughed heartily. "Oh, I don't think so. She's too sensible for that."

"I see," Deborah said quietly.

School Board Seeks $65,000 In Arlington

Is Authorized to Borrow From Two Banks in Alexandria.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The County Board of Arlington County, Va., yesterday authorized the County School Board to borrow $65,000 from two banks in Alexandria at 5½ per cent interest. The loan to be repaid by December 10.

Of the total, $28,000 would be used to repay outstanding bank loans, $15,000 to repay a loan obtained from the county funds and $22,000 to pay current school expenses.

The board authorized County Manager Roy S. Braden to write the commanding officer of Fort Myer suggesting that an agrement be reached between the county and the Federal Government whereby the county would obtain sewer line easements across the Federal reservation at locations approved by Federal engineers. The lines would be built so as to serve Fort Myer, Arlington Cemetery and the Experimental Farm which comprises about one-twelfth of the county's area. The county would maintain and operate the trunk line system and disposal plant, with the Federal Government paying a yearly rental charge for the service.

Right of Way Sought.

A committee composed of Chairman Lyman M. Kelley, Mrs. Elizabeth Magruder and County Manager Braden was appointed to confer with officials of the Arlington and Fairfax Railway Co. to obtain street right of way along Washington avenue between Clarendon and Hatfield. The committee will ask terms on which the property of the company may be acquired by the county.

The railroad has abandoned street car service over this road and has removed the tracks. The county officials are considering acquiring the railroad right of way for the development of a boulevard to connect with the Lee boulevard near Hatfield.

A resolution was adopted under the new street-naming program that all number and letter thoroughfares be designated as streets rather than avenues or places; that streets parallel to the Lee boulevard be numbered streets and that the number be followed by the word north or south, depending on which side of the boulevard they are located, and on the letter or name streets the north or south designation will preceed the street name. All through streets in the county or bias streets or roads are to be designated as avenues or boulevards.

Sewer Cost Estimated.

The estimate of the total cost of sewer construction now going on in Arlington County as prepared by the J. N. Chester engineers, was submitted. The first eight contracts are the actual cost, but the others are estimated. The actual cost of the first eight projects is: Pipe, $276,000; castings, $10,100; long branch, $30,000; Virginia Highlands, $98,850; Arlington Heights, $50,250; Alcova Heights, $123,200; South Lyon Park, $52,300; Four Mile Run trunk line, $180,000.

The other sewer projects are New Arlington, $80,000; Potomac trunk No. 1, $160,000; Potomac trunk No. 2, $90,000; Ballston and vicinity, $190,000; Cherrydale and vicinity, $135,000; Bon Air and Glen Carlyn, $50,000; Fort Myer Heights, $65,000; Mount Vernon boulevard, $85,000; Four Mile Run trunk No. 2, $100,000; Falls Church and Lee Heights, $90,000; other trunks, $100,000; additional pipe, $50,000; additional castings, $2,000, and sewage disposal plant, $135,000. This would make the total cost $2,152,700. The board was notified that the PWA had approved the award for concrete pipe testing to the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory for $3,599.20.

A report of the inspectors of weights and measures during the past month showed 217 places of business visited and 632 inspections made. Of this number, 72 scales were found to be incorrect, 41 gas pumps incorrect, 11 grease pumps incorrect and 33 gas pumps not being used. The inspectors stated that by incorrect they did not mean that the measures were short weighing the public as a large number were found to be giving over measure. The inspectors tested 266 gasoline pumps, 61 kerosene pumps, 48 grease pumps and 259 scales.

Report on Traffic Survey.

County Manager Braden submitted the result of a three-day traffic survey at the intersection of Wilson boulevard and Military road, near Rosslyn, at which point Sheriff Howard B. Fields had asked that a traffic light be installed. The survey showed that 15,194 cars used Wilson boulevard and 8,747 used Military road between 6 a. m. and 8 p. m., during the three days. It was recommended that a traffic actuated light be installed at that point at a cost of $1,025, instead of the old type traffic light. The matter will be decided next month.

Mrs. Francis Wallis, of Cherrydale, offered to give the county a site of about 1½ acres on Donaldson road between the Washington-Lee High School and Cherrydale for park purposes and a county library site. If the county accepts the offer, it will be required to erect a library building within a certain time or the land would revert to the donor.

It was voted to purchase land adjacent to the sewerage disposal plant site near the mouth of Four-Mile Run from the Garfield Manor Corporation, containing 2½ acres at $750 an acre, on the condition that the corporation grant the county free easements to all its property for the laying of sewer trunk lines.

County expenditures totaling $17,127.95 were ordered paid. Of this amount $12,024.24 was for pay roll.

Bids were opened yesterday for the surfacing of the Wilson boulevard and Washington street approach to the Arlington Memorial Bridge and other streets. The county board plans to meet again tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. to consider bids and award contracts. The bridge approaches must be completed prior to September 15.

Rain Threatens Tobacco.

3 D.C. Men Charged With Hijacker Plot

U. S. Authorities Act in Bladensburg Attempt.

Frederick Redmond, Henry Leish and Max Sklar, all of Washington, were yesterday charged by Federal authorities with conspiracy in connection with an alleged attempted hijacking at Bladensburg last Sunday night.

Charges were placed against the men when they were taken from the jail at Upper Marlboro for a hearing before United States Commissioner J. Frank Parran.

The hearing, however, was postponed until September 21, when three other Washingtonians, who were alleged to have participated in the fracas, failed to appear. They had been released on bond.

The men were arrested by Prince Georges County Constables Warren Peake and Howard Slater after an auto chase from a Bladensburg barbecue stand. Several shots were said to have been fired. The constables were called by Town Bailiff Lawrence Dayton, who discovered the men scuffling over a carload of alleged liquor.

Coroner to Sift Auto-Crash Death

A Prince Georges County coroner's jury will meet Saturday, September 8, to inquire into the death of Charles Wilson, 45, of Upper Marlboro, killed in an auto accident early yesterday near Brandywine, Md.

The Wilson car, operated, police said, by Thomas Wilson, colored, 50, also of Upper Marlboro, was alleged to have attempted to avoid a car operated by Jehoshaphat Monte, 1241 Twelfth street northwest. It overturned.

Thomas Wilson was removed to Providence Hospital suffering with head injuries. Monte was ordered to appear at the inquest, which will be held by Acting Coroner F. H. Billingslea at T. B., Md.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Blackie Has Them Guessing.

The night of the cornshucking at Mr. Man's house was a night to be remembered and talked about by everybody for miles around. Two mighty curious things had happened. Somebody that made the most outlandish tracks anybody had ever seen went to Mr. Man's house and carried off a whole barbecued pig, while he was gone away for just a few minutes. That was one curious thing. And while the crowd were all eating supper, somebody from away up in the air had dropped down on Mr. Man's plate a note of thanks for the nice barbecued pig.

One thing certain, the man who carried off the pig couldn't fly over the table and throw down a note, and it was just as certain that a bird that could fly over the table couldn't write a note, and he couldn't carry a pig away. It was a curious happening, and it just about broke up the supper party, for they were all so puzzled over it that they felt more like talking about it than eating the good supper. And when somebody said he would bet it was another of Blackie

Certainly those tracks were not bear tracks, and certainly no bear could have carried off that pig without dragging its feet along on the ground. And they were just as sure that Blackie could never have written that note, nor could he have flown over the table and dropped it down on Mr. Man's plate. There just wasn't any answer to the question. It did "beat all," and you could prove it by Uncle Joe, for he said so, several times.

When Who-Who Owl dropped the note on the table, he perched himself up high in the old sycamore tree and behind a lot of leaves and balls, and he shut his eyes so that the firelight wouldn't "shine" them. He sat there and heard all the talk about the "Strange Animal" and Blackie Bear, and, sober old fellow that he was and is, he could hardly keep from laughing loud enough for the crowd to hear him. It nearly choked him to keep in his throat that loud "who-who-who" that he wanted to say, but he didn't say a word, and folks down under the tree don't know till this day that he heard every word they said, and that he told it to that "Strange Animal" and Blackie Bear before he went to sleep.

Yes, he just sat up there and listened, and then he would crack his eyes open just wide enough to get a little peep at them. He just wished that Blackie had been up there with him to help him look down on that crowd of puzzled cornshuckers who couldn't half keep up with the doings of a bear. And now the sight of it all would have made that old Grinning Jake, Billie Possum, nearly grin his teeth out!

It was late in the night before the crowd broke up and started for home, and every one of them wondered if that curious flying and walking somebody had gone to his house and done some mischief while he was away from home.

Who-Who stayed in his tree till everybody was gone and Mr. Man and his wife had finished cleaning up the supper table, and had gone in the house and to bed. Then he flew down under the old walnut tree and picked up two walnuts in his big claws. He never was much of a joker, but that frolicking spirit must have got in his blood, for he flew up pretty high over the house and dropped the walnuts down on the roof, and they made an awful noise, but they didn't bring Mr. Man out. And who would have come out?

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS . . . a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contain no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

Yankee Left In Wake by Rainbow

Takes 2-1 Final Series Lead; Yachts Race Again Today.

Vanderbilt Gets Yankee in Pocket to Gain Edge at Start.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 30 (AP).—Rainbow scored her second successive victory over Yankee today in the final trials to select a defender of the America's Cup, outsailing the Boston sloop by 2 minutes and 21 seconds over a 30-mile triangular course.

The victory left Rainbow holding a 2-to-1 lead over her only rival in the final trials. Yankee won the first meeting, but now has run into two defeats in a row.

Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of Rainbow, virtually won today's race before the starting signal. He had Yankee in a pocket from which her pilot, Charles Francis Adams, was unable to escape, and Yankee trailed Rainbow over the line by about a boat length.

Adams tried vainly to get to windward of Rainbow, and the boats engaged in a luffing match which left Yankee with no way on her and her opponent running free. Soon after the start Rainbow had a very comfortable lead and the positions of the rivals did not change greatly throughout the balance of the race.

The race was sailed over a 30-mile triangle in a northerly breeze which was measured at 14 knots at the start and 13 at the finish.

Quite apparently, the selection committee has not yet decided which would be the stronger defender to send against Tom Sopwith's Endeavour, the British challenger, for no sooner had New York Yacht Club officials come ashore than they announced Yankee and Rainbow would race again tomorrow.

While Rainbow has taken the lead in the final trials, Yankee still has a rather ponderous margin of victories on a basis of the earlier series. She entered the finals with an 8-to-3 standing with Rainbow.

Ballast Added by Yankee.

Three tons of additional ballast were placed aboard Yankee tonight. Rainbow took on several tons of ballast before the final trials began and the Vanderbilt boat immediately showed improvement. Yankee's after-guard hope the new lead pigs may be the deciding factor in her behalf.

Sopwith had Endeavour out on the course again today, and she did not remain so aloof from the contending American skippers that they could avoid seeing how well she performed. She moved like a confident, graceful queen, her blue top sides and white canvas gleaming in the sun.

Vanitie, Gerard Lambert's old and now ineligible cup boat, and Frederick Prince's Weetamoe, eliminated earlier in the week, came out with Endeavour, but they lagged well astern before many miles were sailed.

The summary of today's race:

Start, 10:40 (standard); course, 30-mile triangle; breezes, 14 to 13 knots, north by east to north.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30 (AP).—Professional football will face the greatest challenge ever advanced by collegiate gridiron stalwarts at Soldier Field tomorrow night when the Chicago Bears tangle with the College All-Stars of 1933 under the arc lights before a throng of 75,000 to 80,000 spectators.

The game will be the first preview of the 1934 season. The profits will be devoted to charity.

During the last few years, the professionals have consistently turned back the collegiate forces to convince fans that the professional brand of play is the stronger of the two. Defeat for the Bears, champions of the National Professional Football League, tomorrow night would give the collegians smug satisfaction and a big talking point in their favor.

The kick-off is scheduled for 8:30 p. m. If it rains tomorrow afternoon or in the early evening, however, the game will be postponed until Saturday night.

Picked College Squad.

A picked squad of 36 collegians, selected in a Nation-wide poll sponsored by the Chicago Tribune, has been in training for two weeks under the direction of three of the ablest coaches in the country—Noble Kizer of Purdue, Dick Hanley of Northwestern and Jimmy Crowley of Fordham. Mal Edward, Purdue line coach, has been assisting the triumvirate.

The Bears will take the field with the same line-up that won the National League championship last fall, with two exceptions. Keith Molesworth, fleet litttle back, will be missing, as he is playing shortstop for Baltimore in the International League. Doehring, southpaw passer, also will be an absentee.

But to replace this pair, Coach George Halas has come up with several newcomers, among them Wayland Becker, of Marquette, an end; Connie Collin, of Creighton, a half, and two ponderous tackles, Art Buss, of Michigan State, and Dick Davis, of Pennsylvania Military Institute.

Hoewatt's Single Decides as Fleming Wins to Even Series.

WRIGLEY FIELD, Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—A single by Phil Hoewatt, with the bases loaded in the thirteenth inning, gave Cumberland, Md., a 4-to-3 victory over New Orleans here today and squared the American Legion's junior world series at one game each.

The sensational finish supplied by the Cumberland centerfielder broke up a marathon pitchers' battle between Fleming, of the Marylanders, and Dana, the Southerners' hurler. Cumberland was outhit, 8 to 7, but bunched blows in the sixth for two runs and tied the score at 3 to 3 in the eighth with another. The winning hit came with one out after Cumberland had filled the sacks as Dana weakened.

Everhardus Quits Pros To Coach at Penn State

Detroit, Aug. 30 (AP).—Herman Everhardus, all-American football star at University of Michigan last year, today asked to be released from his contract with the Detroit National Professional Football League team that he might become assistant gridiron coach at Penn State.

Cy Huston, general manager of the Detroit club, indicating the request would be granted, said he had telegraphed Everhardus in Chicago wishing him luck. The former Wolverine star, who led the Western Conference in scoring last year with 64 points, is to play with the all-America Stars against the Chicago Bears Friday night.

Oliphant Grid Pro.

Philadelphia, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles, of the National Professional Football League, announced today the signing of Marshall Oliphant, former Ohio State three-letter man. It was believed Oliphant would be a candidate for the quarter-back post.

Mako Downs Hall in Rye Net Upset

Wednesday's Conqueror of Stoefen Is Defeated in Straight Sets.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—Gene Mako, Los Angeles youngster who holds the National junior and intercollegiate titles, blasted his way past J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., veteran, to reach the semifinals of the Eastern grass-court tennis championships along with Frank Shields, Frankie Parker and George Lott.

Racing through the first five games without a break, Mako went on to hand Hall a 6—4, 7—5 beating in the only major surprise of the day. Hall had created a sensation yesterday when he put out the second seeded player, Lester Stoefen, and his defeat in straight sets came as a startling upset.

Other Stars Advance.

The other three semifinalists advanced through the quarter-final round with even less difficulty. Shields, seeded No. 1, won the first seven games in succession as he eliminated Clifford Sutter, twice winner of this tournament, 6—0, 6—4. Parker ousted Jack Tidball, of Los Angeles, former intercollegiate champion, 6—1, 6—3. Lott won in easy fashion from Berkeley Bell, of New York, 6—1, 6—3, to run his string of victories over the former Texan to eight in succession.

The pairings tomorrow call for Parker to face Mako and Shields to engage Lott.

The semifinals also were reached in women's singles with Baroness Maud Levi, of Minden, Nev., and the three British stars, Betty Nuthall, Katherine Stammers and Freda James, as the survivors.

Latona-Shenkin Win Net Doubles

Beat Deck-Hy Ritzenberg in Capital City Finals.

Tony Latona, the jumping Georgetowner, added another championship to his collection yesterday when he and Herb Shenkin won the Capital City League doubles tournament final from Pat Deck and Hy Ritzenberg, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1, 10—8. Latona copped the singles crown for the second straight year last week and was the defending champion in the team event.

The winners had a slight edge throughout, but the final set was anybody's tussle right up to the end. Latona and Shenkin had match point several times before cashing in on their lead. The champions were seeded No. 1 and the runners-up, No. 2. The match was played at Potomac Park.

Braves vs. Red Sox.

Vinson Beats Peacock by 1-Up Score

Missed Putt Eliminates Medalist on 18th Hole at Columbia.

Dettweiler, Roesch and Greene Reach Round Before the Finals.

By Dave Herman.

A GOLFING drama with a heartbreaking finish was unfolded yesterday at Columbia Country Club in the long-awaited match between Roger Peacock, of Indian Spring, and Gene Vinson, of Manor, and ended tragically for young Peacock, the medalist, who missed a putt of less than 3 feet on the eighteenth green to lose in the second round of the District championship.

Vinson triumphed by 1 up, his margin of victory being Peacock's ill-fated stroke that sent the ball exactly 2 inches off line.

Until that fatal move the battle was even. Peacock, battling grimly to regain the title he won in 1932 at Chevy Chase, had split the fairway with his drive from the home tee and smacked his approach 25 feet past the pin. The Mississippi terror, Vinson, also down the middle in front of his opponent, fired a booming second shot that finished 20 feet past the pin. Peacock putted up and Vinson followed suit, his putt stopping a foot from the cup.

Peacock Too Careful.

Peacock putted meticulously—perhaps too careful—and his best was a 5 to a conceded 4 by Vinson.

Thus was written into the books one of those never-to-be-forgotten matches, in which the tide of victory swung back and forth with pendulum regularity.

Vinson's blood-tingling conquest sent him into the semifinals, where he will be pitted against diminutive Hickman Greene, of Argyle, who eliminated Louis Fuchs, of Indian Spring, 1 up on the nineteenth hole, and Maury Nee, of Columbia, 3 and 1.

In the lower bracket, 16-year-old Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, will engage Frank Roesch, tall, thin Washington Golf and Country Club golfer, who is exceedingly anxious to win back the championship he won four years ago at Burning Tree. Clicking steadily from tee to green, Dettweiler put out Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, 3 and 2 in the morning and John Shorey, of Kenwood, whom Billy is succeeding as the "boy wonder" of District golf, 4 and 3, in the afternoon. Roesch's victims were Harry Pitt, of Manor, 1931 champion, who fell 3 and 2, and Luther Steward, jr., of Columbia, who was defeated by 2 and 1.

Nee Wins on 22d.

Twelve matches were played yesterday, but the long-awaited battle between Peacock and Vinson commanded the attention of the gallery. Peacock's first round opponent, Lunn V. Steele, of Army-Navy, went down, 5 and 3, and 18-year-old Willis Hurd, jr., of Indian Spring, bowed to Vinson after leading the Manor star for the first five holes. As thrilling as they come was the match in which Nee sank a 10-footer for a birdie 3 on the twenty-second hole to defeat Levi Yoder, of Indian Spring. Equally as exciting was Greene's victory over Fuchs on the nineteenth, where he (Greene), too, hatched a birdie 3 to smoke out his rival. Steward spoiled Billy Shea's sixteenth birthday by eliminating the Congressional kid on the twentieth hole.

For the 18 holes Vinson shot 37, 33—70, even par, while Peacock had 38, 35—73. Peacock got off on the wrong foot when he blasted over the green from a trap to lose the first hole. He evened the count by winning the second. On the fifth Vinson made a great 3 iron shot out of a trap 200 yards away from the green for his par 5, and Peacock

Rippy Makes Ace, 3 Birdies For Record 29 at Rock Creek

A HOLE IN ONE—the rarest of all shots in golf—and three birdies enabled Claude Rippy, 21-year-old public links star, to shoot a 29 and establish a new competitive record for the first nine of Rock Creek's course yesterday in the semifinals of the "Uptown" golf tournament.

Rippy's 29, 5 under par, broke by several shots the best score ever made in tournament play at the hilly municipal course. It was made at the expense of Frank McAleavy, who was eliminated by 8 up and 7 to play.

The former North Carolinian's ace was achieved on the sixth hole, a 220-yarder, and followed hot on the heels of Rippy's birdie deuce on the fifth hole. Rippy used a No. 3 iron to hole out from the tee. Traveling on a low trajectory, the ball dropped some 15 feet from the green, and, without deviating from its course, dribbled 2 inches past the cup and by some freak rolled back into the hole.

Rippy scored his second birdie on the seventh hole, laying his approach dead to the pin for his 3. After parring the long eighth, he holed a 5-footer for a birdie 3 on the ninth, a 318-yarder, driving some 290 yards.

Public links golfers could recall of no other golfer who had scored that low for nine holes in competitive match play at Rock Creek. In the heydey of his glory, George Voigt, nationally known golfer, played the course in the low 30s, but never as low as 29 in official combat, according to veteran followers.

Rippy, winner of the "Uptown" Tournament last year, is a strong favorite to repeat in this morning's finals against Herman Allen, who defeated 14-year-old Buddy Sharkey, 3 and 2, in his match yesterday.

By shooting 5 under par yesterday, Rippey is believed to have set some sort of record for his three matches. He had an even 68 against John Connelly Tuesday, and was 2 under par for 13 holes of his match against Earl Jamison Wednesday. He has licked "Old Man Par" by 7 strokes.

Detroit Rallies Win, 6-1, Over Indians

Averill's Homer Only Run Until Tigers Pound Pearson in 7th.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Tigers stubbornly refused to be downed today and after tottering on the edge of defeat for six innings, slammed their way back to beat the Indians, 6 to 1, in the series opener and maintain their five-game lead over the Yankees.

The Tigers not only conquered Monte Pearson, the Indians' mound ace, but did it without using any of their first-string elbowers. Schoolboy Rowe, for one, was watching the Yanks play in New York, while Carl Fischer and Elon Hogsett subdued the Tribe with seven hits.

Mexico's Four Impressive In Drill

By John R. Vosburgh.

MEXICO'S invading army polo-ists rode rough-shod over a perfectly good United States Army Third Cavalry team yesterday on the West Potomac field before 2,000 startled Americans and 100 very pleased spectators connected with the Mexican Embassy.

It was the Mexican's first public workout since their arrival in this country for a series of three matches with a picked United States Army team starting September 19 and they proceeded to make their debut in the form of a devastating assault on the Cavalry forces which left the latter smarting under a 9-to-4 trouncing that was even worse than the score indicates.

The Third Cavalry outfit surprised itself by playing the best polo it has exhibited all year and this fact, together with the preference of the Mexicans to unleash their true power only at intervals, contributed to make the game a better-than-average attraction. Only 30 minutes were played instead of the usual 60, the game being limited to 6 periods of 5 minutes each, instead of 8 of 7½ minutes.

Army Observers Impressed.

Rough, hard riders and masters of the mallet, the Mexies created a marked impression on the numerous Army observers.

Chunky Antonio Nava, the reckless, happy-go-lucky No. 2 man on the Mexican team, was the chief damage wreaker of the afternoon. Nava rides so fast and swings his mallet with such effectiveness that he appears to be in two or three places at once. The Cavalry tried three defense combinations in an attempt to halt the hardy youngster, but to little avail. He scored four of the Mexicans' goals, counting once in the second and fifth periods and twice in the third.

Capt. Peres Shines.

Capt. Antonio Perez, the Mexican back, was a power on the defense, breaking up play after play, but found time to go down the field on the offensive several times under the Mexican system of sending the No. 4 back through on attacking sallies.

Capt. Quintin Reyes, Perez' fellow-back, not only effectively rode

Weaver Is No Puzzle to New York

2 Walks, 2 Passed Balls in 1st Inning Aid Yanks to Take 3-0 Lead.

Sewell's Homer, Triple by Schulte Save Nats From Shut-Out.

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Aug. 30 (Spl.).—The American League champions dropped to a point exactly 26½ games behind the league lead this afternoon following a little brush with Lefty Gomez, of the Yankees, who brooked no interruption in his current winning streak that now has reached nine consecutive games.

Gomez produced one of his better pitching performances today. In fact, he held the Innocents Abroad to five desultory hits. But he couldn't shut 'em out. No indeedy. Luke Sewell hit a home run in the third inning and Fred Schulte hit a triple in the fourth, which accounted for Washington's share of the 8-2 score.

In fact, after the fifth inning, when Pete Susko hit a single with two out, the Nats rolled over and surrendered to Mr. Gomez with a completeness that is attested by the box score, which reveals the grand sum of no hits for Washington in the last 4 1-3 innings.

Gomez Has Lead.

Gomez was operating all afternoon behind the comfortable protection of a big Yankee lead which his pals had hornswoggled out of Monte Weaver as early as the first inning, when Prof. Weaver was finding the answers to his pitching problems landing all over the outfield terrain of far-flung Yankee Stadium.

In fact, the first man out in the Yankee's half of the third inning was Prof. Weaver himself. He was put out on a magnificent play of Manager Joe Cronin, who went far to his right on the play. In fact, he went so far to his right that he came up with Alec McColl, who was resting in the bull pen, and deposited McColl on the pitching mound to finish the rest of the game.

The Yanks didn't dally with Weaver. Neither did they dilly. Crosetti commenced right off the bat, as it were, with a single into center field, and it was the opening wedge of a three-run uprising. Luke Sewell was present today—present with two passed balls in the first inning that helped the Yankees no end. The first sleve-like effort of Sewell occurred after Weaver had walked Saltzgaver, and both runners advanced.

The Bases Filled.

Weaver thereupon filled the bases by walking Babe Ruth and Sewell thereupon contributed another pased ball with Gehrig at bat, Crosetti scoring. Then Gehrig bounced a single off Susko's glove and the Yanks had their 3-to-0 lead.

Naughty Mr. Sewell atoned in part for his first-inning pranks by knocking his home run into the left-field stands in the third, which only stirred the Yankees to greater deeds and they flew back at Weaver immediately.

Babe Ruth commenced the third-inning abuse of Weaver by dumping a hit into left field, and it bounced into the stands for a ground-rule double. He trundled home on Lou Gehrig's single to right. The next offender was Bluege, who threw Chapman's grounder wildly past Kerr, and the next offender was Weaver, who walked Lazzeri, filling the bases. At this point Cronin went into the bull pen for McColl.

Selkirk greeted McColl with a fly to Manush that scored Gehrig and Jorgens greeted McColl with a single to center that scored Chapman, and the Yanks were ahead, 6 to 1.

After that matters didn't make much difference.

Seco Pays $66.90 to Top String of Six Longshot Winners at Nearby Marlboro

Infilee Lone Favorite to Triumph

Silver Cloud, at 10-1, Starts Parade; 4,000 Witness Program.

By Walter Haight.

THEY piled the favorite players up in heaps and rolled them away at nearby Marlboro yesterday afternoon. The historic track, famed for the way the public choices march home to the click of the mutuel machines, rebelled with a vengeance, and when the smoke of battle had settled into the fog of the Patuxent, a string of box-car numbers, ranging from $9.50 on Royal Lassie in the final to $66.90 on Seco in the second, were written into the records.

Down the stretch came the horses and up went the odds. It was 10-1, 30-1, 7-1 and 8-1 on down to the wire. There was some relief as a second choice worked his way into the winning circle in the fifth race and a breathing spell when Infilee finally cracked the ice for the favorite players in the sixth. However, if there was any money left in Favoriteville at that stage it did an about-face in the last race when Post Brigade tossed the chalk players for another goal.

For the third day, Marlboro had perfect racing weather and a large crowd. Betting was topping last year throughout the day and it was estimated that 4,000 were on hand for the sport.

Silvery Cloud Awakens.

Silvery Cloud, which folded like a puff of smoke on the opening day, forgot to quit yesterday and forged to the front soon after the start to stay there throughout the five and a half furlong first race. The veteran Jockey Quattlebaum put up one of his good rides and bounded home ahead of Foxtee and Peggy Can to pay a $23.60 mutuel.

The record mutuel for the meeting, one of $66.90, cropped up in the second race. Seco, a 4-year-old maiden, beaten by two country miles in his last ten starts, suddenly found speed enough to defeat a field of seven over the sprint course as the favorite players wept buckets of tears. The race was run in walkathon time, but Jockey Passero put up a whale of a ride on the winner, setting most of the pace and finding enough left in his mount at the finish to stall off the rush of Baby Rox. Shenvalee, the heavily played favorite, had her troubles getting third money.

Jockey H. Edwards was suspended for the remainder of the meeting for rough riding on Lady Buck. As usual, he was allowed to ride out his mounts for the day and came back in the fifth race with a masterful performance to get Black Dreams to the wire.

Mexicans Score in Practice Brush With Third Cavalry Polo Team

off a swarm of American scoring attempts, but fought his way through on offensive jaunts at frequent intervals, scoring on two of these occasions.

The Mexicans rolled up leads of 7 to 1 and 9 to 2, and were never pressed. Perfection of their stroking and teamwork was emphasized particularly.

After the game, Capts. Miguel Zambolgoitia and Nic Chavez, the Mexican reserves, paired with Lieut. C. H. Reed and Lieut. George Reed, of the Cavalry, in a two-chucker workout against the regular Mexican four, which ended with the latter holding a 3-to-1 advantage.

First race—Pollydee was away poorly in her first outing here. Made up a world of ground. More alert handling today will find us starting the card with a winner. Only Fooling was impressive in two appearances at Cumberland. She is speedy and hardly can be crowded out of the money circle. Jinnee, on Charles Town form, would have to be considered.

Second race—Dutiful finds less opposition here than she faced in her previous race at this course. Took four in a row at Charles Town. A consistent filly. Clear Knight is at his best, and will be ready if the top one falters. Justa Teacher may awake.

Third race—Nay Nay barely missed taking down the long end of a purse here opening day, bowing to Lodorus by a nose. Davis may make his move sooner today. The Gen is about due to battle for main money, and gets second call. Lampoon closed fast the other day and deserves money mention. Small Change, Lady Buck and Big Dipper would figure, but will hardly see action.

Fourth race—Clocker Mike will attempt to chase Grand Baker home for the benefit of his clients. Personally, I like Aella. She returns to her favorite route. Sambo G. for the show.

Fifth race—Kingbird ran a nice race in earlier in the week, although he was closer up in the early running than is usually the case. I expect a waiting ride today. Bokie B. defeated cheap ones at Cumberland. Could be close here. Clocker Mike begged me to put Porphyry on top. He says Quattlebaum will do the riding.

Sixth race—Cliftons Agnes may benefit from a shift of riders and come galloping home with the chief award. Showed a neat effort at Cumberland last week. Bay Wrack and Larissa for the other money places.

Seventh race—Sand Bell failed us the other day, but I'm going right back. The veteran is on the improve. Rollick and Merry Miss to complete the money bracket.

AMID the wild cheering of teammates and spectators, the flying feet of Jane Hill sped past those of Josephine Samperton and Alice Follin late yesterday afternoon in the final event of the girls track and field meet of the Municipal Department of Playgrounds at Central Stadium and snatched victory from the Georgetown team and deposited it into the lap of Director Joe Mitchell, of Sherwood Playground. Had Miss Samperton won, Georgetown would have captured the city title and The Washington Post trophy, but the victory of Miss Hill, anchor "man" of the Janney team, threw Georgetown into second place by the narrowest of margins, 1 point.

The meet opened with a parade of contestants to the music of the band of the National Training School for Boys, with over 1,000 brightly clad lassies in line. Then, assembled before the grand stand, the athletes took the "playground oath" through the voice of Miss Mary Liegus, of Georgetown, and it was a colorful spectacle for the spectators, many of the groups showing considerable taste in the garbing of their squads.

Honors to Miss Lewis.

Evelyn Lewis was prettily arrayed as "Miss Sherwood," gaining the title as the most popular girl on that ground.

Not one of the 18 events was won without plenty of competition, the 70-pound and 85-pound classes producing almost 150 candidates in each contest, necessitating between 25 and 30 heats in the dashes, and 27 teams of four were spread across the greensward in the 100-pound shuttle relay which rung down the curtain and decided the championship.

National and State Champs In Title Skeet Event Here

DR. R. G. VANCE, of Waban, Mass., National skeet champion, and Mrs. Vance, holder of the woman's title, and the Waltham (Mass.) team, National team champions, will come to Washington tomorrow to compete in the North-South skeet shooting championship, to be held at the National Capital Skeet Club on the Bradley boulevard, Bethesda.

Entries have been received from a number of State champions, for both individual and team events to be run Saturday afternoon and Sunday. A rather unusual feature in sports, is that skeet is often something of a family affair, husband and wife, sons and daughters being entered in many of the events.

The Middle Atlantic champion, William P. Conway, of New York, will be accompanied by Mrs. Conday and their son, Phil. J. L. Hanley, secretary of the Connecticut Skeet Association, and his daughter, Winifred, holder of the Connecticut title for women, will both shoot. The Delmonico brothers, Louis and Charles, of the Loantaka Skeet Club of Morris Plains, N. J., will compete in the senior men's events.

Twenty silver prizes are on exhibition at the official headquarters of the association at the Mayflower Hotel.

In the Saturday afternoon program are included two .410 gauge events, along with women's and junior championships. This .410 requires a high degree of markmanship, the loads used containing only about one-third the shot normally used.

Beginning at 9 o'clock, Sunday team and senior events will take place. Entries for these have been received from Waltham (Mass.) National team; Loantaka (N. J.) Middle Atlantic champs; New Haven Gun Club, holder of the Connecticut title; Towson Gun Club, Maryland champs; Camp Fire Club, of Briarcliff, N. Y., and the Valhalla Skeet Club, of New York.

Baseball's Law of Averages Finally Catches Up With Rowe

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Perhaps it was just as well last Wednesday that a not-particularly important ball club, yclept the Philadelphia Athletics, drove Schoolboy Rowe, of Detroit, to the needle sprays looking a little hurtfully at his pitching arm, feeling of it with his fingers and hanging his head with wonder, shame and surprise.

The schoolboy is a very young man. He is a great athlete and a very fine baseball pitcher. He has many splendid years ahead of him. He would not get the greatest enjoyment out of these years if all his triumphs were lumped into one season. Such panegyrics as the schoolboy received in the press in the last seven days ought to be thinned out a trifle and spread over a little more bread. After all, he is little more than a boy, and the sweet sugar of unstinted praise is not the most digestible stuff for the untutored stomach.

Contains a Moral.

I sympathize with Master Rowe for the moment of pure unadulterated saffron-tinted hell that he must have suffered when Cochrane told him he had enough. But he will be the better for it, the more useful to his organization, the more respectful of the inscrutable, unyielding somthing known as the Law of Averages.

The big schoolboy had a special dispensation from this law when he tied the American League record with 16 straight victories. It smacked just a little of greediness to come pleading to the bar for another so soon. True, there was no harm in trying, but the youngster should hold no grudges because the plea was denied.

After all, for a young advocate he had traveled far. He will some day go much farther, but with greater humbleness of spirit, with less expectations and with more respect for the miracle of averages that is being worked for him. At that, it was a pity that Cochrane didn't work Rowe in the first game. The dynamiters scored 12 runs in that one, including a 6-run rally in the eighth inning, another to add to their amazing total of explosive innings.

Yes, that was a great mistake, cooling the young man in the dugout for a whole game before letting him go in there and throw. He must have been pretty near a mental wreck before he walked up the little steps to pitch.

For one thing the young pitcher may be profoundly grateful. There was no "almost," or "it might have been." The Athletics did a good job on him. They walloped him for 10 runs, which is a good round number and leaves little room for brooding over a close call. If Rowe had made one mistake it might have been fatal to his morale for the rest of the season, but the handsome young man made them lustily, in bunches. He will get over that quickly. He will not become obsessed with the notion that he is one of fate's ugly ducklings. He will realize that he just had a very bad day and forget about it, and the next time out he will be very hard to beat.

Adjectives Throttled.

Thus, anticlimactically, in the Shibe Boys' ugly ball yard in Philadelphia, ended a rather grandly epic baseball story, leaving many of us with lockers full of fine adjectives and adverbs and superlatives, which is probably a good thing, too. If Rowe had set a new record, I suspect that ordinary newsprint might not have held with safety the fireworks some of us would have touched off.

I saw a lot of the boys coming up out of the powder room with arms full of verbal rockets, pinwheels, star shells and triple bursts. Nothing short of an asbestos edition would have held us. I feel, somehow, that what happened in Philadelphia late last Wednesday afternoon was perhaps all for the best. Perhaps all of us, Mister Rowe and his minne-singers, will be better off saving it for the forthcoming world series, which will be the thriller of thrillers. At least there is no harm thinking so.

Vinson Wins

matched it by sinking a 12-footer. They reached the turn all even.

Vinson Makes Eagle.

Peacock went 1 up on the tenth by laying his approach stoney for a birdie 3. He became 2 up on the eleventh, when Vinson overshot the green with his second. On the twelfth Roger hit the trees on his second, was trapped on his third, and conceded an eagle three to Vinson. Vinson nailed a 15-footer for a birdie deuce on the thirteenth, beating Peacock's birdie, lost the fourteenth when his drive caught a trap, and made a miraculous 100-foot putt for a half in 3 on the sixteenth after being trapped the shot that proved the turning point of the match.

On the seventeenth, a 270-yarder, Peacock reached the hill in front of the green with his drive, and Vinson attempted to drive the green—being 1 down at that juncture—but his ball faded far into the chasm to the left of the green. He played a spectacular pitch and run shot that left him a three-foot putt for his birdie. Peacock, 20 feet away, putted up to within 9 inches of the pin. Vinson's putt rolled into the cup and jumped out, teetering on the brink. It was a dead stymie, and Peacock's only salvation was to chip into the cup. His attempt failed, and he knocked Vinson's ball into the cup, losing the hole.

The Post Sandlotter

THE manager of the G. P. O., College Park, Grace, Acacia, Kann's, Heurich Brewers and G. P. O. Federal teams, hich have won the championships of the Departmental, Maryland Suburban, Georgetown Church, National Capital, Department Store, Industrial and Federal Leagues, respectively, are requested to send to the secretary of The Post Association their lists of players eligible to represent their teams in the week-day interleague series. These eligibility lists should be handed in by Saturday night. The series is scheduled to get under way on Wednesday, September 5.

The Occoquan Athletic Club has listed the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association Team for Saturday and the Franconia A. C. Team for Sunday's game. Both these games will be played at the Woodridge field at 3 p. m. Arrangements are also under way to schedule a strong unlimited team for Labor Day. Unlimited teams in the District and nearby Virginia wishing Saturday and Sunday games during the balance of the season should call NaNtional 6000, branch 658, or write to the Occoquan A. C., Occoquan, Va.

One of the most successful teams operating this season has been the Miller Furniture nine of Section B, of the National City League. The Furnituremen won the first-half championship in this section but, due to two losses, are practically out of the second-half race. Last Sunday, Millers put a crimp into the pennant hopes of the Union Printers when they handed them their first defeat of the second half.

The success of the team has been due, in a large measure, to the excellent pitching of George Wood and Joe Porter, whilethe hitting of "Queenie" Riegleman, "Wave" Wheeler and "Reds" Porter has been responsible for many runs. To keep on edge, the Furnituremen will play a three-game series with the Westvaco nine of Covington, Va., over the coming week-end. A single game is scheduled for White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., on Sunday and a twin bill will be played at Covington on Labor Day. Manager Tut Turner requests all his players to be ready to leave from 343 Tennessee avenue northeast on Saturday at 1 p. m.

All Majestic Radio players are requested to meet promptly at 6:30 tonight at Tenth and H streets northwest for their trip to Altavista, Va., where the team of that town will be encountered on Saturday and Sunday. On Labor Day, morning and afternoon games will be played in Lynchburg.

After conferring with Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Ball Club, V. M. Lawrence, president of the District Independent League, announces that the protest submitted by the Ross Jewelers in regard to their game with the Mount Rainier Grays, has been decided in favor of the Jewelers.

Gallagher Under 200 Pounds

Bass, Sarron May Meet Sept. 18

Bass Suspended, May Not Be Allowed to Fight for 30 Days.

Opponent for Cool Is Sought for Ahearn's Hunt Club Card.

MARTY GALLAGHER, Foggy Bottom's gift to the heavyweight industry, who blundered into the punishing left hook of Tony Galento to be hammered out of a unanimous decision in one of Washington's fight classics, will follow an entirely different plan of battle against Turn-'Em-Over Tony when the two retangle over the 15-round route at Griffith Stadium Monday night.

Two methods of combating the murderous protege of Jack Dempsey have been suggested to Gallagher and he will confer with his manager, Jim McNamara, today, to decide which one will be selected. Details of both plans are being kept highly secret by the Gallagher entourage and it is expected that his actual training will be done behind closed doors, although he may indulge in a few public workouts in which he will not disclose his battle plans.

Marty tipped the beam at exactly 200 pounds yesterday—the lowest weight he has achieved since he first started fighting as a heavyweight. His physical condition is well-nigh perfect now, having been achieved in a strenuous two-week campaign in Boston with Tom Kirby and other well-known New England heavyweights.

The pot is boiling merrily about a return match between Benny Bass and Pete Sarron, who was fouled out of commission in Monday night's embroglio at Griffith Stadium. Both sides have agreed to the rematch—with reservations—but the leading role in Promoter Joe Turner's play to get the boys together again will be taken by the Boxing Commission.

Under the rules of the commission, Bass is automatically suspended for 30 days for fouling out and, unless the commission lifts the ban, he will not be eligible to appear on the next Turner card, which ordinarily would be held September 17. Even should the solons of sock decide to waive the suspension, Bass will not agree to box on September 17, which is a Jewish holiday, and Turner would be forced to seek permission of the commission to hold his show on September 18, Tuesday, instead of his regular Monday night. In the past, the commissioners have refused to shift dates for promoters assigned regular nights.

Phil Glassman, who handled Bass for the Sarron fight, expressed eagerness to accept the rematch, but would not agree to show here on any definite date. Turner is leaving for Atlantic City this morning to witness Bass' fight with Eddie Shea and attempt to sign Bass for September 18.

Jimmy Erwin, Sarron's manager, said that he welcomed the chance for Pete to demonstrate to the Washington public that he can beat the Philadelphia Fish without benefit of fouls, but also insisted that all foul rules should be waived for the contest.

Goldie Ahearn has an option on the services of Eddie Cool, flashy Philadelphia lightweight, for his next Riding and Hunt Club card. He has wired Max Waxman to get either Lew Feldman or Joey Costa as an opponent. If they are not available, Ahearn will use Tony Morgano, Boo-Boo Hoff's junior lightweight prospect, to head his next card on September 10.

24 Footballers Start Drills at Keyser High

Keyser, W. Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Twenty-four boys have reported to Coach Dana (Horse) Lough as candidates for the Keyser High football team. The first practice was held Monday. Lough has replaced Bert Harbert as head coach here. Harbert is now directing the Allegany High team in Cumberland. Lough tutored the Piedmont High aggregation last year.

Twelve of those reporting were members of last year's squad and Lough believes he will be able to mold a strong team. Among the veterans are Leslie Yost, Raymond Stafford, Charles Bolyard, James Frazer, Kenneth Rice, Jack Deputy, Frank Pezzamite, Richard Welch, Benny Randalls, Lloyd Robinson and Maurice Newkirk.

The schedule follows:

September 22, Davis High, here; 29, Franklin High, away; October 6, Potomac State Frosh, here; 13, Allegany High, here; 20, Mercersdale (Pa.) High, away; 27, Martinsburg High, away; November 2, Penn Avenue High, in Cumberland; 16, LaSalle Institute in Cumberland; 24, Moorefield High, here.

Hook, Line and Sinker

By Jean Monk.

IT is not the policy of this column to engage in criticism of boat captains or fishing parties. If errors are made, and we hear about them, we frequently make efforts to correct those errors or offer friendly suggestions.

More adverse publicity than was necessary has been given to direct attacks on boat captains at Governor Run, Md. A. B. Astin, local fisherman, mails in a very fine view of this type of criticism.

He and four other fishermen reserved a boat (as they thought) or passage on a boat (as the captain assumed) last Saturday afternoon at Governor Run. The boat was large, their party was small, and there were six or eight others, some of them women, who wished passage on that same boat.

So—there you are. What would you have done? The party was stag. They insisted on the boat. The captain said the old adage, "Women and children first," held good in fishing circles. The result was a disagreement and temporary hurt feelings, but it is all over now.

Mr. Astin calls in to ask where they may go this week and be sure of a small boat. That's a better plan. The boats at Kenwood Beach and Governor Run are suitable for 10 to 20 people. They have had to cram them in at times down that way.

At St. Jeromes.

St. Jeromes Creek, down Point Lookout way, is headquarters for bluefish these days. Capt. Brady McKay, in his letter of August 27, says:

"Last week I had fine luck with the blues and trout. Capt. L. L. Cobb, of Fort Meade, Md.; James Wible, Louis Armstrong and Charles Byrns, of Forestville, Md., caught 92 trout and 35 blues trolling on August 20—all nice, large fish.

"Mr. Henry Lewis, of Washington, caught 50 blues on August 21. There were five in his party. Mr. Henry J. Hudson, of Baltimore, Md., caught 45 large blues on August 24 and two bonitos that would weigh 15 pounds or more each. Also a mackerel."

I was at St. Jerome's Creek from Monday night until Wednesday afternoon. I went down to look the bluefish situation over with the thought in mind that I might learn something about trolling for blues. I got in with two men from Washington Tuesday about noon, and we set out for the Middles. Minor motor troubles held us close inshore and the effort was worthless. But we picked up 22 small blues trolling and quite a number of croakers and trout still-fishing.

Alive with Bluefish.

Capt. Brady McKay landed 60 bluefish that day trolling, and Capt. Raub Drury delivered 56 chumming. The bay out from St. Jeromes and off Point Lookout is alive with bluefish. Wednesday morning the northeaster breezed in about 8 o'clock. I hung around until 3 p. m., then left for Piney Point. But more of the St. Jeromes trip later.

Henry Junemann, of Tall Timbers, writes: "Fishing continues good off Tall Timbers, the hardheads are still running large, Norfolk spots are getting more numerous and there are more blues than usual.

"Mr. and Mrs. Louis Potter and their son, Louis, jr., who are just as 'at home' catching fish as they are with their music, have made several good catches of hardhead and spots while vacationing at Tall Timbers.

"Dr. Charles H. Beach and Bob Varelahold hold high honors here for Norfolk spots, 250 of the prize 'pan birds' at one fishing.

"Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Flanery, Henry J. Sterzer and Mr. Bailey, of Bailey's Radio Stores, waited out the storm last Saturday night and came in with 15 rock and blues weighing from 2 to 8 pounds each.

Get Norfolk Spots.

"Today (Sunday) mid-day, Maj. Wallace W. Kirby, Eskew Grant and Hugo Schulze came in with three strings, each about 4 feet long, consisting mainly of Norfolk spots. Fourteen nice trout were among this catch, as well as some large hardhead."

I spent Wednesday night with U. E. Blair in his cottage at Tall Timbers, and about sundown W. T. Sherwood, J. G. Bright, W. D. Perry and E. L. Lindsey, all local fishermen, dropped in by appointment.

We fished all night, more or less. Sherwood has some good ideas about chumming, using individual containers, dispensers, &c. But more of that later.

Stakem Named to Head Cumberland Bowlers

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Patrick J. Stakem, Cumberland, was again elected president of the Allegany County Bowling League at a meeting at the Club Recreation Alleys. He succeeds Oliver Wittig, of Frostburg, who was named head of the loop for the 1934-35 season at a meeting last spring but who resigned due to the press of business. William P. Conley was appointed secretary.

Thomas C. Stakem, Lonaconing, and Harry Tantlinger, Cumberland, were named as a schedule committee by President Stakem. The season opens September 7. The league will be composed of eight teams—Liberty, Savoy and Club, of Cumberland; Majestics and Jackson-McGraw, of Frostburg; Stakem, of Lonaconing; Fallon, of Westernport, and Adams, of Keyser. The Devon Club, of Luke, and SS. Peter and Paul, of Cumberland, have withdrawn from the loop.

Chesapeakes Lose 1-0 Thriller to Culpeper

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Culpeper's ten-man baseball team defeated Chesapeake here today, 1 to 0, in a thrilling game.

Arguments over Umpire Joe Guyon's decisions marred the game throughout. In the ninth, with three on, Humphries bunted in front of the plate, Phenix touching the pan and doubling Humphries off first. Guyon ruled the ball foul, although the fans howled in disgust. Perkins allowed four hits and struck out eight Culpeper hitters. Walter Beale was touched for six bingles.

Ft. Humphreys Polo Team at Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—The Fort Humphreys (Va.) and Washington County Polo teams will meet in two games here Saturday and Sunday. The Virginia team has defeated the local team twice this season, 10 to 5 here, and 6 to 5 on the Virginia field.

The Federal Diary

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

The hard work and overtime which Federal Housing Administration workers have been putting in is to be rewarded. They will be excused at 4:30 p. m. today and not be required to report back for duty until Tuesday morning. This announcement was greeted with cheers yesterday.

THE enlarged retirement division of the Civil Service Commission, which was formed by merger with Veterans' Administration employes engaged in retirement activities, yesterday was established in new headquarters in the Mather Building at 916 G street northwest.

Tomorrow, this division will start the administration of all of the provisions of the civil service retirement act and the Panama Canal retirement act, which has been split up between the Veterans' Administration and the Civil Service Commission.

In the new division there will be 84 workers, of which 68 were transferred from the Veterans' Administration. Carl N. Andreen, chief of the Civil Service group before the consolidation, will be in charge. The section is part of the service record and retirement division of the commission, of which Louis H. Fisher is chief.

D. M. Stuart, radio engineer of the Bureau of Air Commerce, has developed a method by which aviators flying "blind" may know when they are in the "cone of silence"—the dead space just above the transmitting towers of a radio range beacon.

This is done with a special receiving set which lights up a red light on the instrument board when the cone of silence is reached. The set picks up a high frequency wave broadcast vertically in the cone of silence area.

This development has been thoroughly tested at Washington Airport and is so satisfactory that the bureau is now considering plans for equipping all its radio beacons with the special vertical beam apparatus.

Ernest G. Dodge (*), examiner for the Civil Service Commission, will speak on Esperanto, the international language, at 4:30 p. m. tomorrow over radio station WJSV. Mr. Dodge is chairman-elect of the Esperanto Association of North America

Representatives of several of the 18 departments and agencies where Local No. 2, National Federation of Federal Employes, has members, have reported substantial gains in membership. These gains, made despite summer dullness, were reported at the meeting of the membership committee of the local.

Lottie M. Anderson, Forest Service, chairman of the committee, who presided at the meeting, said that conditions here were never better for the N. F. F. E. In the future her committee will meet on the third Wednesday of each month, preceding the meeting of the board of representatives of the local.

"With no intention to discuss politics at all," said E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday, "it may be said that quite obviously the Government employe feels the effect of the New Deal first as consumer. As prices rise his pocketbook is pinched. Inasmuch as he is on a fixed salary, his position is exactly the same as that of other workers so placed.

"The effects of the New Deal and of monetary policy are apparent enough to the Government workers, and his protection from those effects is equally apparent. It is exactly the same protection that is prescribed for other workers by the New Deal—that is organization in unions that can represent their common interest."

An Old Film Partnership Is to Be Revived on Fox Lot—"Sez You"; "Yes, Sez Me"

Eddie Lowe Is Dickering for NewAgreement

Will Team With McLaglen; Kiddies Given a Treat; Gossip of Theaters.

By Nelson B. Bell.

That loud talking you have been hearing—thickly punctuated with "sez you's" and "sez me's"—if you listen carefully, will be found to be coming from the general direction of the Fox lot, where they are talking shop with Edmund Lowe.

The new contract, when, as and if consummated, probably will be elastic, permitting the star who can be either hard-boiled or suavity itself—recall his Sergt. Quirt and then the society physician in "Dinner at Eight"—to accept assignment from other studios, possibly as often as three times a year.

Lowe recently appeared in "Gift of Gab," one of their first four pictures for the new season as set forth in this space yesterday, for Universal and is due back in Universal City for another feature in November, while Columbia expects him to team with Jack Holt in "Two for One," and another as yet unnamed.

Back With Capt. Flagg.

At any rate, there he is, this handsome Lowe fellow, back at Fox ready for a new feature that will reunite him with his habitual friendly enemy, Victor McLaglen. Rumors that he would replace the ailing Spencer Tracy in "Marie Galante," which has been temporarily halted, probably are without foundation.

I have to laugh every time I think of Eddie's coffee-and-pistols mustachios that look so black, pointed and perky on the screen. Actually, they are so blond that, along with his eyebrows, you would never see them at all if he didn't carefully douse them with mascara before going before the cameras or behind the footlights. But he is a grand guy, notwithstanding—and a very fair actor, both literally and figuratively.

Three stooges in search of Ted Healy—in other words, Howard, Fine and Howard, Inc.—are clear up to here in the first of a series of eight short-reel comedies for Columbia. These burly rascals will cavort through the gay episodes of a satirical little thing known as "Men in Black," a "take-off" on you guess what Pulitzer prize play that was afterward made into an almost equally successful picture, with L. Monta Bell as producer for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. As if that were not nonsense enough for one day, Andy Clyde will deliver six short comedies of his own, the first being dubbed euphoniously, "It's the Cats." The country could use a few good laughs, at that!

A New Farmer Stevens.

H. R. Baukhage, excellent Washington actor, made his first appearance in "The Drunkard," atop the Hotel Willard, last night, playing the role of Farmer Stevens with what the boys in the back room are accustomed to refer to as great elan. He will appear in the part regularly on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, with the exception, of course, of next week when the famous old melodrama will be given only on Thursday and Saturday nights owing to an earlier contract for the main ballroom of the Willard.

Recently the Roof Players had as their back stage guest at the Willard, Mr. H. E. Currier from the Cherry Lane Theater in Greenwich Village, New York, who himself plays the villian's role in the lower Manhattan production, presented without benefit of beer and pretzels. This is the role played so exceedingly well by M. Forney Reese at the Willard and by Fred Haskin, jr., out at the Roadside Theater. Mr. Currier reports that "The Drunkard" is playing to enormous business in the Village and that his company's next production—somewhere in the dim and far distant future—will be Augustin Daly's "Under the Gaslights," another celebrated old-time melo.

The fame of "The Drunkard" as enacted at the Willard, incidentally, has spread pretty well over the countryside. Tomorrow night a large group of members of the Fredericksburg Drama Club, which is under the direction of Levin Houston, will come up from Fredericksburg, Va., to see the show.

Nat Pendleton, whose forebears are no strangers to the City of Washington, in recognition of valiant conduct in "The Thin Man," "Death on the Diamond" and other recent films, has been retained by M-G-M under a new term contract. The bulky Mr. Pendleton's career has been unique in that first gaining reknown for his sinister presence in a cycle of gangster thrillers, he has gradually emerged from his hard-shelled masquerading in the semblance of a first-rate light comedian. Mr. Pendleton at one time was a heavyweight wrestler, but came to his senses in time!

According to Hoyle.

Items from the notebook of Bill Hoyle, Montgomery County's ear-to-the-ground theater operative, pasttiming briefly on the Gay White Way—so called because it is not white and no longer very gay—en route to Boston:

Eleanor Powell, the stage's incomparable, raven-haired tap dancer, has just recovered from a tonsil operation and goes into the stage bill at the Capitol Theater next week . . . Cross and Dunn, headlining the Hollywood Restaurant floor show since last May 7, have never received less than six encores at a performance . . . They have been on nine out of 12 Fleischmann hour broadcasts, five of them in succession, and have just signed with Warner Bros. for five short screen subjects . . . Broadway's famous N. T. G.—that would be Nils T. Granlund—m. c. at the Paradise, hot night spot, is taking a new show over to the Dorchester in London to replace the one he already has there . . . Principals include Arnida, Norman Prescott, Ken Harvey and "The Golden Girl," who seems to be a Miss Rosezell Roland . . . Last Saturday night, Mr. Hoyle found himself lamentably involved—in the capacity of victim only, mind you—in the first case of stench-bombing anyone can remember on Broadway . . . It happened in the entrance corridors of the "Mayfair" as a result of an operators' strike . . . It effectually put a damper on the goings-on for that night . . . Jack Denny, well known locally by reason of his engagements at Wardman and Loew's Fox, finished an engagement at the State last night and after a week's layoff will pick up at the Pierre . . . And thanks to you, Bill, for taking the trouble.

Owing to the success of previous Bing Crosby screen attractions in the National Capital, it is announced from the executive offices of the Warner Brothers that a special schedule of performances will be in force for the Washington premiere of "She Loves Me Not" at the Earle Theater today, as well as for Saturday and Monday. Today's schedule of six features and five de luxe performances will be found in the "film tables" on this page and will prevail also tomorrow and Monday. On Sunday, four performances will be given at 2:50, 5:20, 7:50 and 10:20 p. m.

New Distaff, Too.

A new alliance of comedy talents will be disclosed to Washington's picture-going populace today at RKO-Keith's Theater, where RKO-Radio's musical production of "Down to Their Last Yacht" bows in as the Labor Day week screen feature.

For the first time, Mary Boland, famous for her many comedy roles on both stage and screen, and Polly Moran, celebrated for her individual low comedy and as a teammate of the late Marie Dressler, will combine their comic endowments as a man-minded queen of a tropical island and a ship-wrecked captive who becomes her masseuse, respectively.

These able comediennes of such sharply contrasted methods are supported by a cast of 27—count 'em—27 fun-making favorites, a chorus of 100 (or thereabouts) walnut-stained chorus gals and 24 perfect males—if there is any such animal!

With all this, the picture had better be good, Mr. Meakin.

Yesterday afternoon at 3, the kiddies who have been confined to their beds in the Children's Hospital, Thirteenth and W streets northwest, longer than any kiddie ought to be confined there were given a real treat through the kindly thoughtfulness of Nathan A. Stiefel, manager of the Howard Theater. Mr. Stiefel went to the trouble and expense of setting up motion picture projection machines and sound apparatus and giving the youngsters a full program of talking pictures. This kindly gesture brought an hour or two of sheer delight into little lives that a good deal of the time, I am afraid, are not too happy. An extra star opposite your name, Mr. Stiefel.

What's-in-a-Name Note.

Gus Edwards launched him in his "Kid Kabaret." Since then he has been "Kid Boots," "Kid From Spain" and now "Kid Millions."

Some kidder, this Cantor!

Mary Pickford Leaves Fairbanks For Aviation Race

Hollywood, Aug. 30 (AP).—The romance of "Mary 'n' Doug" tonight apparently was right back at the point where, to all outward appearances, it was resumed two weeks ago.

Only yesterday the eyes of Hollywood swerved to the top of one of Beverley's topmost hills as reports emanated from Pickfair that Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were on the verge of a reconciliation.

Today, however, "America's Sweetheart," like Mark Twain, informed the film colony the report was "greatly exaggerated." She declined to elaborate.

Meanwhile, the paths of filmdom's first family separated again. Mary prepared to board an East-bound plane for Cleveland to preside as hostess and honorary referee at the National Air Races.

Potomac Squadron Off Tomorrow for Rally

Members of the Potomac River Squadron, local chapter of the United States Power Squadrons, will leave at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the Corinthian Yacht Club for their annual Labor Day rendezvous at Occoquan, Va.

A meeting and entertainment tomorrow will be followed by an exploration trip Sunday.

Mae West Gives Away Diamonds to Her Picture Crew; Betty Compson to Direct Films in China; Small Talk of the Picture Colony.

By Speed Kendall.

Hollywood, Aug. 30.—Mae West knows her diamonds, and there is one jeweler somewhere in Hollywood or Los Angeles who knows she knows them.

Always noted for her big-heartedness, Miss West passed around $15,000 worth of presents to the cast, director and members of the crew that helped her make her picture, "Belle of the Nineties." This was her customary manner of thanking them for their cooperation in helping her make a successful picture under extraordinary circumstances accountable to the new censorship demands. One of the presents was a $1,000 diamond ring. To whom she gave it remained his and her secret yesterday. The ring was too large and the recipient took it back to the jeweler to be made smaller. He failed to notice the rock when he got it back, but when Miss West chanced to run into him on the Paramount lot she became infuriated. There was a different stone in the ring she had given him—a yellow diamond instead of the original blue-white sparkler.

BETTY COMPSON.

In 15 minutes she had the jeweler on the carpet. He professed a mistake had been made. Anyway, when the ring was returned to Miss West the right diamond was back in its place. The stone was one from her collection—a hobby with her.

Miss West didn't forget a soul in passing around her gifts. From the director down to the assistant property man there was an appropriate present. Odds are that everybody at the studio will want to work on her next production.

New Venture In Orient.

Betty Compson was on her way yesterday to conquer new fields of adventure. She is headed for China, and there, under a newly formed company, she will become Betty Compson, film director. In her possession when she left Hollywood was a contract for her to direct Chinese productions with native casts and spoken in Chinese. Her husband, Irving Weinberg, now in Shanghai, made all the unique arrangements for Miss Compson. As far as known, this is the first time a prominent Hollywood actress has been handed such an important post. How Miss Compson will manage to direct players wno speak in the Oriental tongue is a moot question. But she seems willing to try. She plans making personal appearances in Australia and other countries while away.

Inside Dope On A. W. O. L.

No favoritism from Director Henry Hathaway. A veritable city arose overnight on a 3,200-acre ranch, 42 miles from Hollywood, for locations for the "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." Hathaway issued orders nobody was to leave the ranch except on week-ends. But we discovered that Gary Cooper has been secretly meeting his wife, Sandra Shaw, at a lodge several miles away.

A Change For Miss Tobin.

In most of her film roles, Genevieve Tobin was seen as the cold, glamorous type, arousing no sympathy and bringing happiness and sorrow to others. Now, for the first time, she is assuming a sympathetic role in "By Your Leave," at Radio Studio, and also for the first time in her career she will shed screen tears.

Wallace Beery Takes a Chance.

An expert aviator—a licensed transport pilot and member of the Naval Reserve—Wallace Beery faced a daring picture stunt yesterday. He accepted the challenge to go aloft in a replica of the old Curtiss pusher-type plane of the vintage of 1918.

Stocks Droop Nine-tenths in Slow Trading

Heavy Tone Pervades Market; Sales Total 649,410 Shares.

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—Stocks continued to slip in slow trading today, making the fourth consecutive session of gradual decline. A heavy tone pervaded most markets as Wall street tried to peer through the thickening clouds of labor troubles and currency unsettlement for a glimpse of fall business improvement.

As the British pound fell sharply again, touching a new low for the present decline around $5.01, off more than 2 cents, there was increased apprehension currency depreciation would start a fresh wave of deflation in gold standard countries.

United States Government bonds eased with other sections of the security list and liquidation of German bonds continued.

Stocks Under Pressure.

Stocks remained under mild pressure, but volume dwindled as traders retreated to the sidelines to await the passing of Labor Day. The textile strike call for Saturday and a reduction in salaries by the U. S. Steel Corporation and other steel companies had a depressing effect upon sentiment in speculative quarters.

Losses of fractions to about 2 points were general in the stock list at the finish. Dome and McIntyre, among Canadian gold shares, were steady on the advance in the London open market price for gold to a new peak and sugar shares responded quietly to strength in raw sugar. Cuban-American Sugar sold up more than a point, to the highest price recorded this year.

Otherwise, bulls found the pickings in stocks extremely thin. Armour of Illinois preferred, American Locomotive, Atlantic Coast Line, Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit, General American Transportation, General Railway Signal, Johns Manville, Union Pacific and United States Steel preferred were among issues showing losses of 1 to 2 points.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dropped nine-tenths of a point to 72.7. Turnover was 649,410 shares against 761,530 yesterday.

Although the dollar was firmer against the French franc and other European gold currencies, another export shipment of $1,300,000 in gold for France was announced.

With Labor Day around the corner, markets got little inspiration from business news.

A further decline of $17,000,000 in brokers' loans, as shown in the weekly Federal Reserve statements, carried the total down to $793,000,000, the lowest since the week ended January 25.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Business Analysts Hold That Evidence Does Not Warrant Expectation of a Rapid Recovery in Business Activity This Fall.

By Ralph West Robey.

In years when business activity follows a "normal" curve it is customary to have by the first of September definite signs of a pick-up. The real seasonal swing, of course, comes later—not getting started until some time after Labor Day—but after the middle of August one industry after another begins to show improvement. In ordinary years, therefore, it is possible at least by that time to forecast with reasonable definiteness what is ahead for the next few months. This year such forecasts are extremely difficult. As yet there have been no indications of the usual seasonal improvement. In consequence, many business analysts are revising their earlier estimates and are beginning to take what must be termed relatively pessimistic positions.

More specifically, the view appears to be that about the best we can hope for is a recovery that will regain about one-half of the ground we have lost since spring. That loss has amounted to, say, approximately 15 per cent. By this is meant that the recession has been 15 per cent more than the usual summer slump. Needless to say one can not measure such a decline with great accuracy, but on the basis of various indices, 15 per cent would appear to be a reasonable estimate. Thus, the index of production of the Federal Reserve Board has declined some 12 per cent, the index of business activity of Moody's Investors Service about 19 per cent, the index of the New York Times a little under 10 per cent, and that of the New York Herald-Tribune some 16 per cent.

Decline About Equals Last Spring's Pessimistic Forecasts.

This was about the extent of decline expected by the more pessimistic of the analysts last spring. Thus in writing of their opinions here last April 30 it was said, "Among those to whom I have talked I have found opinions that varied from the view that the present level of business activity will be maintained to the belief that there will be a recession of from 15 to 20 per cent during the next few months." In Administration circles at the time it was maintained that there was little reason to expect anything more than the seasonal recession and that at worst it would not be above 5 per cent more than seasonal.

Likewise Administration spokesmen at present are taking an optimistic position. In the first place they will not admit officially that there has been a recession during the summer of appreciably more than the "normal" seasonal, even though their own statistics show that there has been. Secondly, they maintain that there is nothing in the outlook to justify the belief that the pick-up this fall will not be as great as is customary. On the contrary they are making much ado over the possibility that from here on business will show a constant improvement.

Business Analysts Show Caution In Criticizing Official Estimates.

Business analysts, regardless of how firmly they believe in their own opinions, will not go so far as to say that these Government expectations are certain to be wrong. All they will do is present the basis upon which they conclude that the evidence at present does not warrant expecting any substantial recovery in the immediate future.

Outstanding in this evidence is the absence of an effective demand for goods. The railroads provide a good example. For a while the railroads were a large buyer of steel and other products used in the rehabilitation of their properties. More recently, however, the demand has largely dried up. One of the principal reasons for this drying up has been the heavy additional burdens imposed on the roads by the pension plan enacted at the last session of Congress.

Widespread uncertainty among business leaders also is emphasized as a factor tending to work against a fall recovery. Governmental bungling in the capital market is given as another reason.

The net result, it is held by those business analysts with whom I have talked, is that any recovery we may have will have to be in the face of severe handicaps. These handicaps, according to the concensus, will not be great enough to prevent all improvement, but they will hold the betterment to a small magnitude and they will cause it to take place somewhat later than the customary fall rise.

Corn Climbs While Wheat Closes Mixed

Grain Prices Are Confined to Narrow and Erratic Fluctuations.

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Grain prices were confined to a narrow fluctuation range today by apparent hesitancy of trading interests, and the market consequently was nervous and erratic.

After minor price changes wheat closed barely steady, ⅝ cent down to ¾ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, while corn netted a ¼ to ¾ cent gain.

Profit-taking following a decline in the Liverpool market caused the early reaction from yesterday's rising market and then, largely because of a dearth of business, the rise from bottom levels was laborious. Many traders were inclined to wait out the market in anticipation of tomorrow's private crop reports, and the proximity of Labor Day holiday also was a restraining influence.

May Wheat Falls.

May wheat was the only one of the five futures contracts in that grain that showed a net loss for the day. May finished at $1.05-$1.05¼, unchanged to ⅜ down. September options were at $1.02⅞-$1.03, unchanged to ¾ higher, and December new sold at $1.03⅞-$1.04.

December corn closed at 80¾-80⅞, a fraction above the level at which resting orders to buy buoyed that grain, although at one time this delivery showed a high of 81⅛. Rye was off ⅛ to ¼, oats were up ¼ to ⅝ and barely closed ½ down to ⅞ up.

Buying in wheat about midsession, attributed by some observers to the removal of hedges against flour sales, lifted wheat from the day's low. Many traders showed an inclination to wait until Tuesday to determine how well Winnipeg assimilates hedges which are expected to accumulate over the holiday. Good support was in evidence on the dips in price, but the market ran into selling on the bulges. Weakness in stocks and the threatening industrial situation caused some uneasiness.

Corn Is Attraction.

Interest was centered on corn. Evening-up operations, presumably in preparation for the crop reports, were in evidence. Bulls generally anticipated the private estimates will favor their side of the corn market and that further deterioration will be shown. Brokerage houses whose statisticians compile the reports were said to have bought corn.

Liverpool closed lower on favorable Argentine crop news and largely because of the slow milling demand for wheat. Hedging checked rallies at Winnipeg.

Profit taking by longs in December and January lard was liberal and under this pressure provisions prices yielded rather sharply. The close was steady, however.

Foreign Markets.

(Associated Press.)

London—A quiet but cheerful tone prevailed on the stock exchange today, the feature of the market being the buying of gold mining shares on the high record price set for bar gold. Foreign bonds, gilt-edged securities, and industrials were moderately supported, while other sections eased. The market closed irregular.

Paris—The pound sterling continued its steady drop on the bourse today and closed 38 centimes under Wednesday's figure. Rentes and gold mining shares gained in the quiet session, while industrials held steady. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Prices on the boerse reacted after a firm opening and lost their early gains. The turnover was small and the closing weak.

U. S. Customs Receipts Total $323,550,490

Only One Leading District Declines; Detroit Leads Increases.

Of the total amounts collected by the Customs Service during the fiscal year 1934 ($323,550,490), 95 per cent was collected in the 18 leading customs districts, only 5 per cent being received by the remaining 30 customs districts, the Treasury Department announced yesterday.

Practically the same distribution appeared in the receipts for the fiscal year 1933.

More than half the total collections during each of the past two fiscal years were reported by the New York customs district, which reported 53.2 per cent of the total collections in 1933 and 51.8 per cent during the past year.

Philadelphia and Boston also reported large customs receipts, with 8.9 per cent and 8.1 per cent, respectively, of the total collections during the past fiscal year.

The three leading districts, therefore, accounted for more than two-thirds of the total collections during each of the past two fiscal years, 67.7 per cent during 1933 and 68.8 per cent during 1934.

Of the 18 leading customs districts, only five showed a decline in collections during the fiscal year 1934, as compared with the preceding fiscal year.

In four of these five districts, namely, Baltimore, New Orleans, Savannah and Galveston, sugar is the leading dutiable commodity imported.

The smallest decline of the five was the Tampa district, where duties on imported tobacco are of greater importance than those on sugar.

Almost all of the customs districts which reported large increases in collections were those located in areas which permit the importation of alcoholic beverages.

The total collected from this source during the last seven months of the past fiscal year amounted to $24,023,703.

Detroit led the way with an increase of 172 per cent in total collections, while Pittsburgh showed 144 per cent and Chicago 92 per cent increase.

Walt Mason, Himself

Neighbors.

If someone came and said, "By Heck, they're raising armies in Quebec, to come and smite us in the neck, and spoil our maps," we'd lean against the county jail and laugh at such a fairy tale, in Canada wise men prevail, and seek no scraps. If someone to Toronto went, and said, "Old Uncle Sam is bent on ruining your government, with fire and sword," Canadians would say, "Gadzook, you read that fable in a book," and they would all proceed to look supremely bored. If Uncle Sam should wish to drill a lot of soldiers on a hill, and show them how and where to kill a warlike foe, in Canada there'd be no scare, there would be no commotion there, no generals would rise and swear, foretelling woe. Through peaceful cycle and decade our countries dwell like man and maid, no foolish armor is displayed, to warlike ends; there are no forts along the line, there is no ambush, trap or mine, but everything is calm and fine, and we are friends. If any gent should try to break that peace or a disturbance make, we'd promptly duck him in the lake, and if we'd fail, Canadians would take that skate, and spread some tar upon his pate, and ride him out of town in state, upon a rail. How different it seems to be in those sad lands across the sea, where evermore the snickersnee is raised on high; where, if a village half-wit tells some tale of shrapnel, bombs and shells, they ring the loud alarm bells and men must die. A whisper of some tinhorn plot will make the whole land blazing hot, and harmless voters will be shot.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

LOCAL aggregations of radio talent, variously shunted from studio to studio, from contest to contest, in search of sponsorship and recognition and left hanging gloriously in midair, may come to roost on networks, no less!

This time it's a commercial sponsor who has purchased a half-hour of Columbia air Sunday afternoons and who offers the opportunity to appear with Freddie Martin's orchestra, now heard several times weekly with N. B. C.

This said sponsor, who eases the public chest with a certain soothing salve, is allowing radio editors in a number of large cities to pick three individuals or aggregations for auditions before the company's experts. This puts us on the spot. Lists must be in by Tuesday, and auditions start a week from tomorrow.

Contestants are barred who've had network experience. This leaves such glowing possibilities as Helen Ault, Eddie Perkins, Phil Provost and others, including a number of promising troupes who have appeared on N. B. C.'s "Airbreaks" and possibly WOL's "Opportunity Night."

* * * *

PEERING into the sonorific sanctum of WJSV's Sun Dial, throne room occasional and extraordinary for such personable people as Arthur Godfrey, Warren Sweeney and Lee "Bass Voice" Everett, we found apple-cheeked Harold Gray, who stooges for Elder Michaux, amply filling the dais.

Peter Biljo and his Russian Balalaika orchestra are heard Tuesdays and Wednesdays at 6:30 p. m. over WJSV from C. B. S. networks. The instrument he's playing, we learn from authenticated sources, is not a zilch.

"Listen to this," he said, indicating an electrical transcription. Jess Willard, erstwhile turf remover and present assistant manager, also listened within the fastnesses of his office.

"It's dedicated to Plutonic friendship," suggested Bob Trout, looking out at the Monument.

Said transcription, dealing with a more or less apprehensive subject, tells the listener in glowing accents of the aperient joys to be found in a bottle.

Deciding that the method of approach employed should be acceptable, WJSV will slip this one-minute plug somewhere on the moon dial one of these nights.

ROWENE WILLIAMS, blonde and fat winner of C. B. S.'s search for a hat check girl to play opposite Dick Powell in that much-tooted "Hollywood Hotel" show, may not check so much as a single hat or screech a single succulent note.

So thinks a local C. B. S. official who made the prediction yesterday that because Miss Williams is opera trained she may never suit the part when they actually get down to rehearsals. A surprising revelation, this.

There's a clause in the contract, it seems, that says that if for any reason the person chosen fails to click in the part, the runners-up may be re-auditioned.

Something to think about all right. Something for Helen Ault to think about too. Since it was she who placed, unofficially, in second place.

HELEN AULT, the sprightly, brown-eyed lassie who placed second in the "Hollywood Hotel" auditions, is back home.

"I just hate New York . . . it's so rushy," she said. "You look out of the window and see thousands of people . . . you don't know them . . . there's so much noise."

So Helen spent most of her time in Westchester dabbling in the surf.

She spoke in enthusiastic terms of Columbia's hospitality. During the final auditions, it seems, the girls were entertained at a pent house atop C. B. S.'s studios . . . a bar and trimmings were provided but the girls were asked not to partake. Gardenias were presented each night . . . bell boys politely escorted each contestant as her turn came to go on.

And as luck would have it, Helen drew number one! Stage offers are in the offing . . . and she may return to New York soon . . . but from the glint in her eye it's certain she'd rather stay here. Chicago's gay, light-toed winner of the contest vibrates the scales at some 200 pounds, our grapevine correspondent reveals.

And what the gorgeous women are wearing from Paris to Vienna will be expertly explained starting Tuesday at 8:45 a. m. by Miss Betty Hudson, style and fashion reporter with a new series entitled "Downtown with Diana."

Gross Income Tax Foe Wins Appeal

U. S. Court Will Rule Upon West Virginia Law.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Notice was received here today by counsel that the United States Supreme Court had granted an appeal to John Laing, Charleston coal operator, in his suit seeking to have the West Virginia State gross income tax law declared unconstitutional.

Laing's attorney said the appeal had been granted by Justice Owen D. Roberts, on vacation, at his home near Philadelphia.

The tax calls for payment of 1 per cent of gross individual incomes over $600 with exemptions of $1,000 for married men, and $400 for each dependent. Laing entered suit last winter against Fred L. Fox, State tax commissioner, to restrain him from collecting the tax, but last June 15 the State Supreme Court upheld the law.

Laing contends the tax is unconstitutional on three main grounds—that it is retroactive in requiring payment for a period prior to its enactment, that it does not tax all persons alike and that it is actually a property tax instead of an income tax.

Code Head Attacks 5-Cent Bread Price

Warrant Issued Against Staunton Bakery.

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 30 (Spl.).—Warrants were issued here today charging the Spalding Baking Co., of Staunton with a violation of the code of fair competition for the baking industry.

The complainant was Walter C. Michael, Roanoke, chairman of Virginia Regional Code Authority for the Baking Industry.

It was understood that the action was taken after the Spalding Co. refused to heed a warning by code officials to discontinue selling bread at 5 cents a loaf in Waynesboro. The men named in the warrant were J. M. Spalding, G. H. Spalding and E. L. Spalding, all of Staunton. Hearing will be before Augusta County Trial Justice W. Terrell Sheehan at Waynesboro, September 10, and 27 local merchants have been summoned to testify.

Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, used to be the whole show in the Army's heavier-than-air division. He was once the only Army pilot, instructor, navigator and observer.

When the Army bought its first airplane in 1909, the Air Corps was strictly a one-man job. There was only one ship. It was an old open-work pusher—the fuselage was without cover, and the propeller was mounted back of the wings. Foulois was chosen to be the Air Corps, and the Wright brothers taught him to fly.

He had two important qualifications for the job; he was immensely interested in aviation, and he was small. He weighed less than 140 pounds, and the weight of the pilot was an important item in early aviation.

Foulois began his Army career in the Spanish-American War, winning his first commission in 1901 when he was 21 years old. During the Mexican border trouble in 1917, he was commander of the Army's air forces there. In the World War he was chief of the A. E. F. air forces. He became assistant chief of the Air Corps in 1927, and chief in 1931.

Meantime the Air Corps has increased from a one-man, one-plane division to a point where it includes 1,200 pilots and about 1,700 planes.
